3. Use the right font

Each presentation needs to choose the right font to match the layout of the lesson. This also affects viewers' feelings. If Times New Roman font is too monotonous, Comic Sans font will be seriously lacking. It is also recommended that only "flower" fonts be used above the title and only used if easy to read. Some fonts are considered the easiest to look at, the most suitable ones include Helvetica, Arial or Calibri.

4. Adjust the text to match the layout

When choosing the right font, you should also pay attention to the layout of the text to match the slide pattern. Thick words can reduce the concentration of people sitting under, or make people focus on reading and neglect to listen to the presentation. Do not be too greedy when stuffing words into a few lines, if necessary or broken down to express the meaning, the viewer is not "choked" by the words on the slide.

5. Select meaningful pictures

No matter where it is, images are easier to convey than text. In particular, the attention-grabbing image will increase its effect. So in your presentation, try to use very clever images that fit the content of each slide.

6. To be beautiful

Using big, clear images or outstanding messages is also a way to attract the viewers' attention. Avoid using low resolution images, blurry images or small sizes. Or the font size is too small for readers to ignore the presentation.

7. Using infographic

Instead of using a dry data sheet with hundreds of words and dense numbers, you can replace it with Infographic with a more interesting image. Viewers can still grasp the main ideas, but not too much reading. That will make viewers feel attracted to the series of infographic you use.
