

Create referral links in OneDrive to increase storage space

On February 19, Microsoft officially launched the OneDrive service, which will replace SkyDrive's previous name. And also on this occasion, Microsoft also added some notable features for its service. One of these new features is to introduce friends to receive rewards.

On February 19, Microsoft officially launched the OneDrive service, which will replace SkyDrive's previous name. And also on this occasion, Microsoft also added some notable features for its service. One of these new features is to introduce friends to receive rewards.

Accordingly, like Dropbox , OneDrive users can earn more storage by introducing this service to their friends. Introducing 1 person, you receive an additional 500 MB. In this way alone, you can earn up to 5 GB of darkness. In addition, the people you invite, when using OneDrive will also be rewarded with additional 500 MB.

So how do users specifically recommend friends to use OneDrive to receive rewards?

As with other services, users can refer friends to register and use the service through the referral link that the service creates for each user account. And your friends will access the referral link and register for use. OneDrive also has the same mode. And you can get the referral link by accessing the account on the OneDrive website .
