

Dell launched the new Vostro V130 laptop

Today (November 30), Dell launched the new Vostro V130 laptop with a starting price of VND 17.26 million.

Today (November 30), Dell launched the new Vostro V130 laptop with a starting price of VND 17.26 million.

Designed for business customers, the Vostro V130 has a slim design (1.65 - 1.98 cm), light (2.5 kg) and durable (the case is made of aluminum and reinforced with Zinc-alloy joints, magnesium alloy armrests. Vostro V130 is available in red and silver.

The computer is also Dell's first ultra-thin laptop to use Intel's low-pressure blower (Hyperbaric Cooling) to produce low-noise Intel.

In terms of configuration, the Vostro V130 is quite powerful with an Intel ULV Core processor, a standard keyboard and a 13.3-inch WLED high-definition screen. The latest Microsoft operating system is Windows 7. In addition, the Vostro V130 is also equipped with Trend Micro Worry-Free security service software for business and CompuTrace anti-theft software.

The Vostro V130 is the perfect continuation of the V13, but adds an HDMI port to connect to a high-definition TV, two USB 2.0 ports, eSATA and a VGA port. It also supports 802.11n wireless technology and Bluetooth 3.0 with SIM card slots and also webcams.

In Vietnam, the V130 is sold at a starting price of VND 17.26 million (including VAT and shipping costs).

Photo: Engadget.

You finished reading the article "Dell launched the new Vostro V130 laptop" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
