The good news for both iPhone and laptop owners, the Dell Mobile Connect app has now added support for transferring data from iPhone, iPad to Windows 10 laptop.

The good news for both iPhone and laptop owners, Dell Mobile Connect application has now been added to support data transfer from iPhone, iPad to Windows 10 laptop. Previously in the framework of CES 2020, the US computer manufacturer has been hiding about some of the new iOS integration features coming to its Mobile Connect service, and today, these features have been officially released in version 3.0. of the Dell Mobile Connect application.

There are three important new features added on Dell Mobile Connect that iPhone users should be aware of (these features were released with Android but are currently compatible with iOS):

1. Screen Mirroring (screen mirroring) - launch the iOS application on the Dell PC.
2. File transfer (file transfer).
3. Send SMS right on your PC without having to open the app.

Dell Mobile Connect has long been one of the few applications that supports sending and receiving text messages from a PC, especially for users of iOS devices (Android has more options). These new and additional features will help this application to bring more comprehensive support for users.

Typically, features such as screen mirroring and file transfer using iPhone will often require many related factors such as Apple PC, using AirPlay and AirDrop. However Dell said it does not use Apple's proprietary technologies for this.

The ability to send SMS messages right on your PC without having to open the app is also a highlight in this update of Dell Mobile Connect, because previously you had to open the application to send text messages, which takes more time. .

Dell Mobile Connect is pre-installed on all newly released Dell PC models. In addition, devices from any manufacturer can download the app from the Microsoft Store and use it as usual, as long as it is running on Windows 10.
