There are two types of people in the world: one who always tidy up their desktop and the other one does not. The clutter on the computer screen shows that its owner might choose a messy screen because they use computers to do a lot of things . It is for this reason that executives' computer screens are often very messy. Of course, there are indiscriminate advocates because they don't know how to arrange things in order or rarely use computers, so they don't bother with the chaos on the screen.

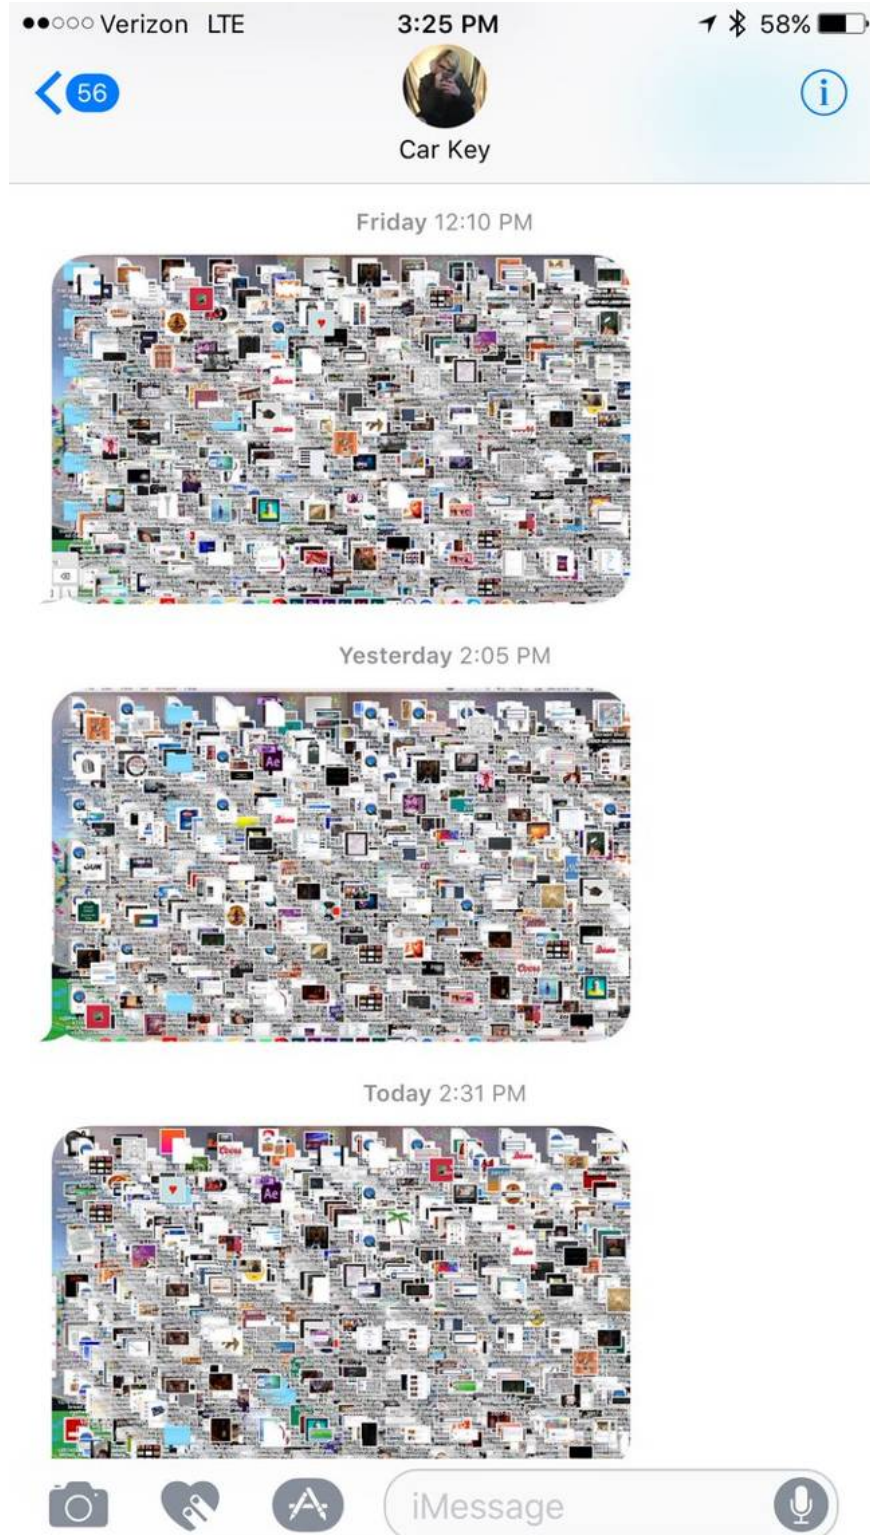

The messy screen people tend to learn better math and love the numbers and concepts. They think that work is an important part of their lives and personal life behind work.

If your desktop is a bunch of files, be brave because you'll definitely be 'lonely'. The images of the computer below are a testament to that.

Twitter @AidaSaidSo users share a screenshot of her conversation with her friend, Carley, who sends her a screenshot of her personal desktop every day.

Carley's computer screen is indeed a 'mess':

On June 24, the @AidaSaidSo user posted a screenshot of the conversation with the annotation: 'Every day Carley sends me a screenshot of her computer and it's increasingly become more "scary"'.

Inspired by the photo shared by Carley, others also captured their computer screen and shared:

User @JasperIW shared:

To be fair, it seems like they have at least tried ~ to arrange the files stored in the computer neatly!

Replying to @JasperIW @AidaSaidSo, the user @lily_lxndr posted a photo with a comment: 'My desktop probably isn't!'

In fact, a screen filled with files can still see the wallpaper.

@Katidoj users also share:

However, there are supporters of a more minimalist desktop approach. All 'cluttered' screens are filled with files on the screen. Even, people don't remember what files they contain and how to use them?

@Christixnsen users share: " I never save on the screen. I hate the messy screen. "

@TheOriginalVeks users posted a photo with the caption: " This horror makes me cry and #desktop #work #coworker #messy #toomuchdamnfolders #folder #horror #worstnightmare ".
