

Different opinions when YouTube changes the interface

This morning, YouTube users will be very surprised when the interface of the website watching their familiar videos becomes extremely new.

This morning, YouTube users will be very surprised when the interface of the website watching their familiar videos becomes extremely new.

Pursuing a simple design style, it seems that YouTube's open video frame has grown a bit more than the previous interface, described by some as a bit confusing to the playlist system, subscription and related videos ' page location ' around the video part being played.

New interface of YouTube, fortunately, is not strange to users. Related videos and videos of the same user will be displayed next to the video frame, instead of at the top of the site.

It can be said that the interface change is a relatively necessary step for YouTube, especially when Google has been investing heavily in this golden egg.

Some users after experiencing this interface give conflicting opinions. Some people think that changing the interface with the video player center is easier to see than before. However, others believe that they are still unfamiliar with the video system of the user displayed right on the right side of the video player box.

You finished reading the article "Different opinions when YouTube changes the interface" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

