

Do you know why smart people are harder to love?

Smart people tend to feel more comfortable when being alone than staying with 'no' people like them. Single is their conscious and thoughtful decision. Most of the time single people are alone are not due to objective circumstances but they are subjective and they feel they are themselves.

With an inactive brain, smart people always try to detect details and causes when there is anything that goes 'wrong'. And as a result , smart people are more difficult to open up to the opposite sex . They understand that any relationship contains 'risks'. That's why they are always cold and deliberately separating themselves while not necessarily so.

1. They have a habit of analyzing their emotions and their opponents

Smart people are often good at collecting information, making assumptions and conclusions. This is both beneficial and harmful, because they can easily give up the relationship as soon as it starts to appear a problem, misunderstandings, or controversies .? 'Sorry, we were born not for each other'.

2. They need more time to open their hearts to the opposite sex

With an inactive brain, smart people always try to detect details and causes when there is anything that goes 'wrong'. And as a result, smart people are more difficult to open up to the opposite sex. They understand that any relationship contains 'risks'. That's why they are always cold and deliberately separating themselves while not necessarily so.

3. They rely on their previous experiences

It is a trap for smart people. Although the things that destroyed their previous love relationship have nothing to do with the next person, it's hard for them to realize this. They still remember how they were suffering and they unconsciously directed their experiences towards the present person.

4. Single is their conscious choice

That is a fact. Smart people tend to feel more comfortable when being alone than staying with 'no' people like them. Single is their conscious and thoughtful decision. Most of the time single people are alone are not due to objective circumstances but they are subjective and they feel they are themselves.
