

Stop searching for 'free movie streaming sites' on Google: Use these 5 websites instead!

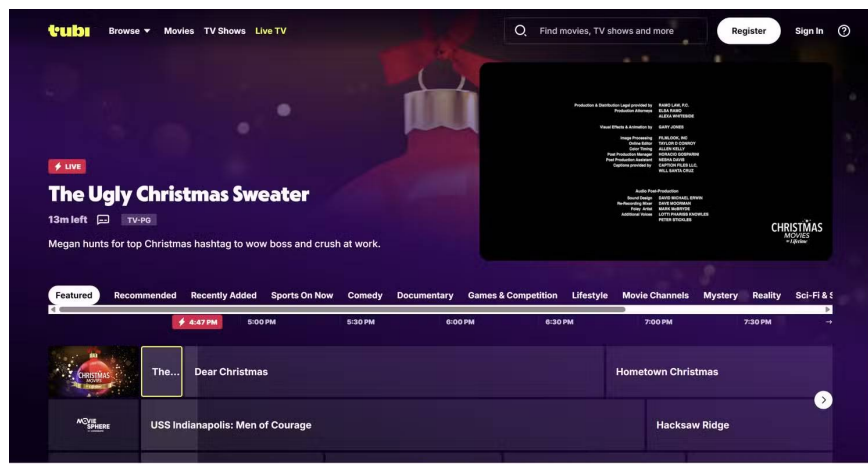

The good news is you don't need to rely on shady websites to watch movies for free. There are several legitimate streaming services that offer thousands of free movies, supported by ads or in partnership with public libraries.

Searching for the phrase 'free movie streaming sites' almost always yields the same results: pop-ups, malware warnings, suspicious redirects, and countless scam sites pretending to show the latest blockbuster movies. It's one of the most dangerous search terms you can enter into Google, and the results rarely contain any legitimate content.

The good news is you don't need to rely on shady websites to watch movies for free. There are several legitimate streaming services that offer thousands of free movies, supported by ads or in partnership with public libraries.

Tubi

Free movies and live TV shows

Several names have emerged as top contenders in the free movie streaming industry, and Tubi is one of them. This free streaming service has become one of the most popular choices thanks to its extensive library of films, including both modern and classic shows across a wide range of genres.

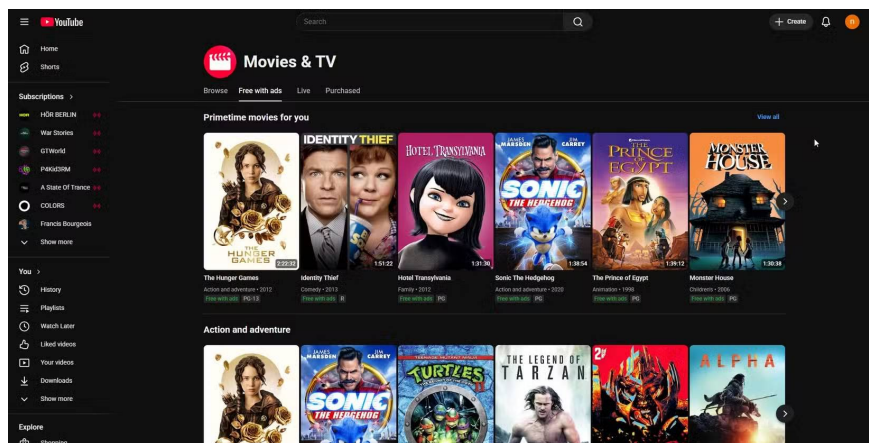

Tubi is also backed by the Fox network, which gives it extra power, but it doesn't require you to subscribe or pay any fees to view its library, and that's something we all appreciate.

It even adds seasonal channels to the Live TV selection, which is a pretty cool feature. For example, the author is writing this during the 2025 holiday season, and you can access and watch Lifetime Christmas Movies; who wouldn't love Lifetime's endless Christmas fun?

Download Tubi on the App Store. Download Tubi on the Google Play Store.

YouTube 's free movies

Another platform with a surprisingly large number of free movies.

YouTube isn't just a place for user-generated content. You can also find a lot of free movies in the Movies & TV section.

As you might expect, most of these movies have commercials, meaning there will be some interruptions. But with the huge number of options available, enduring a commercial isn't really that bad.

You can also switch to the Live tab and watch various free channels, including amc+ Live, Willow TV Live, Paramount Plus Live, and many more. Again, be prepared for ads, but that's a small price to pay for free TV and movies without worrying about malware or other dangers.

The Roku Channel

One of the fastest-growing free movie channels.

Long-time Roku users won't be surprised to see The Roku Channel on this list, as it has become one of the most comprehensive free movie and TV channels. For many, The Roku Channel is truly all they need, offering a vast amount of free content across a wide variety of genres.

One really great thing about The Roku Channel is that it also has a lot of free sports channels, which isn't always the case with other free services. Roku shows football, NBA, MLB, NCAA, UFC, and much more.

What people like about The Roku Channel is that you don't need a Roku subscription to use it, and you don't need a Roku device either. Anyone can access Roku and start watching, which is much better than having to figure out which free online movie streaming sites work well and don't contain malware.

Plex

It's not just a media server.

People have been using Plex for years as a media server before realizing that it offers much more than that, not to mention you can run it on almost any hardware.

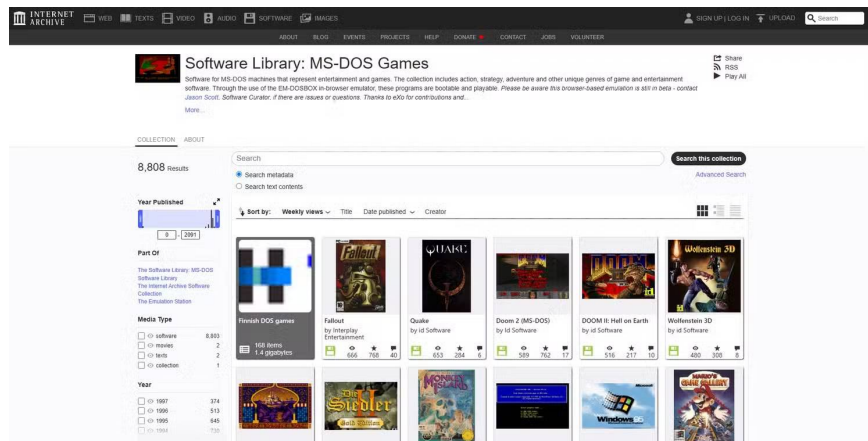

But the reality is that Plex has a whole world of free movies and TV channels for you to explore, including some unique Plex channels you may never have heard of. It does have ads. These ads are quite long and help keep this huge library of content free.

Like Tubi, you can also find a wide variety of seasonal shows and movies, with some channels dedicated to them.

The Internet Archive

A little-known entertainment website

There's a website full of free movies and TV shows that people often overlook, but it's actually one of the best available today. It's less known for its entertainment quality, but The Internet Archive is one of the most comprehensive websites you could possibly want to visit.

What makes it so interesting is that you don't really know what you're going to get. You can search for old TV shows and movies you want to watch, but there's no guarantee you'll find them. But a key part of what makes The Internet Archive so great is that you can find so much other content hidden within.

The Internet Archive also houses one of the most important services on the entire Internet: the Wayback Machine . It's a website that can take you back in time to old websites, cached from decades ago, and it's a vital Internet resource.

You finished reading the article "Stop searching for 'free movie streaming sites' on Google: Use these 5 websites instead!" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.