How to arrange Dota Auto Chess squad to win the TOP 1 in the game

1. The first stage of the game

A. Use straight line formation

Lineup is probably the most popular line that Dota Auto Chess gamers use, first, you can build a squad of melee heroes close to the enemy. In this way, the line-up lineup will make the first match the fastest and most effective. This lineup is placed in a way from the middle of the board and spread to both sides.

You can also place 2-star melee pieces in the front row, then place 1-star pieces in the back. Thus, the skills of 2-star chess pieces will be released sooner.

If you have a squad with Assassins, put them behind instead of the top, this way you can help Assassins jump directly to the damage-causing heroes behind the opponent's line.

B. Use angle formation

This formation is usually best used if you have a good tank champion, along with the generals that cause long hand damage. Protecting the damage-causing generals is the main thing in this formation, if you want to pull your opponent closer to you, you should let your troops get away from the dangerous area.

Outside are buffalo generals who are resisting, inside are generals that create damage, helping these generals not to be attacked immediately. If you rely on the straight line formation above, you place weak blood generals on the last row but leave the hole in the next row to be immediately targeted by Assassins. So put the chess pieces that have the most resistance to buffaloes to the defensive corner near the enemy.

2. Mid-game period

A. AOE skills and how to arrange AOE formations

In the middle of the game, you only need to focus on the generals using the most effective AOE skills, ignoring tank champions and dealing damage. You just need to keep the important pieces in the middle of the board, then let the tank champion on either side of the board. Tanker will pull the enemy team's AOE skills off course, if you're lucky.

And the second way you can divide your team into two different groups, however, each group needs to have 2 heroes that have good damage and 2 pieces that have good resistance. If the two groups have a weaker group, this will be your big problem.

Because if one party is poorly resistant, it may have been destroyed before the opponent's AOE skill, then all the enemy's skills will be for the other group.

If possible, let the pieces use the AOE skill as soon as possible, the pieces like Lycan, Lone Druid, Tidehunter, Disruptor, and Kunkka all need to use the skill as soon as possible. Another thing is that you must avoid being killed too early before using the skill.

That means you need to make these pieces have good resistance, if the above-mentioned generals have a level of 2 stars, there is no debate about their resistance, but if it is 1 star, you should put them after the resisting generals so that you don't have to take direct damage.

Or put in the first row but there must be two tank generals on both sides to resist. It may still be noticeable but still not excessive to avoid being killed too quickly.

B. Use formations to counter enemy attacks

The effective countermeasures are to observe the opponent's formation and arrange their chess pieces to achieve the best effect. You can place the main damage pieces away from Tidehunter, Techies and Disruptor, just by looking at the opponent's board you can know and arrange.

Or leave some units in a single position to lure the enemy to use AOE indiscriminately, if the squad is stuck with AOE skills in about 1/3 of the army is ideal. If the opponent uses the Assassin chess piece, you should place the anti-chess pieces next to the chess pieces that cause the main damage to protect.

There are a few tips to arrange the Dota squad Chess Auto in each stage of the game, based on the above instructions, you can arrange the formation appropriately when referring to your opponent's lineup.
