2. Introduction to Windows 10

The Windows 10 operating system is highly regarded, with many features suitable for a wide range of users. In April 2021, Microsoft announced that more than 1.3 billion devices were running Windows 10. This is a huge number compared to the 300 million devices Microsoft reported a year earlier. Windows in general accounts for more than 75% of all computers worldwide, and more than 78% of those run Windows 10.

Since the initial release of Windows 10 in 2015, Microsoft has launched numerous updates, both large and small. Some updates introduce entirely new features, while others focus on bug fixes and security enhancements. Windows 10 21H1, 20H2, and 20H1 are the three most recent Windows 10 updates, suitable for all users, while the Windows 10 LTSC version is aimed at enterprise customers.

You can download one of these Windows 10 updates via the Ghost Win 10 21H1, LTSC, 20H2, 20H1 download links provided by TipsMake in this article.
