And people don't have to wait long, "software giant" has quickly released a demo of Windows 8 demo for developers to refer.

Everyone can download the demo version of Windows 8 to check it out with the link <http://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/windows/home/>.

Users can install on 32-bit or 64-bit x86 computers, and do not need to activate and still discover this demo.

Of course, this version is still far from the official Windows 8 version, and users need to be prepared to face possible software errors, as this is just a preview.

Ideally, users should try on a virtual machine to ensure safety (using virtual machine software like VMWare).
