

Error Error 404 comes out from room 404?

The well-known 404 'Not Found' ('Not Found') error is often referred to as the 'last web site'.

The famous 404 'Not Found' ('Not Found') error is often referred to as the 'last web site', it is a cultural symbol, a joke. It is printed on a T-shirt, drawn in a comic, it is something that you may not understand, but surely using the Internet must meet at least once in your life.

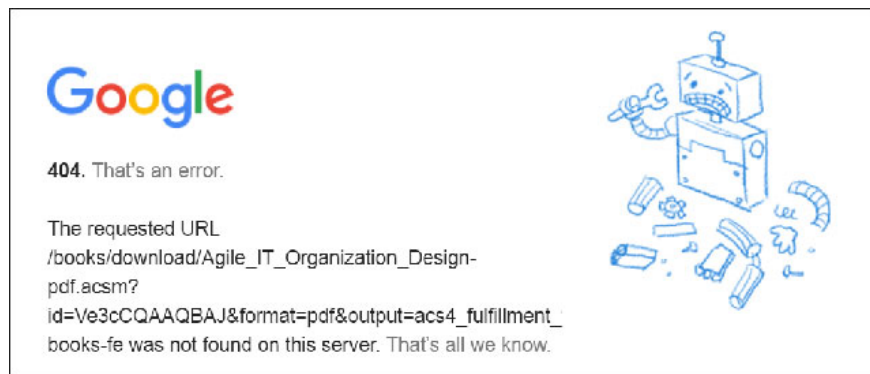

Error 404 also seems to express a personal emotion that every time you see it, the whole world understands: a disappointment when encountering an unexpected incident. It also reminds us that technology in general, and the web in particular, is not perfect.

After all, the Internet is a machine that is 'oiled' to operate. It is a paradise garden built with hypertext segments pointing to a specific address, but also filled with broken links, faulty images and unfinished information.

Not long after its birth, the technology world was rumored about its origin. In the early 2000s, it was reported that it originated in room 404 - where the first web servers were located at CERN, (European nuclear research organization) is also the father's office World Wide Web Heart Berners-Lee, and that rarely finds him here.

When asked about the 404 error, Robert Cailliau, along with Berners-Lee, was the pioneer of creating a hypertext structure that led to the web today, saying that this is a fabrication.

Each page shows a way, but seeing everyone's 404 number is understandable

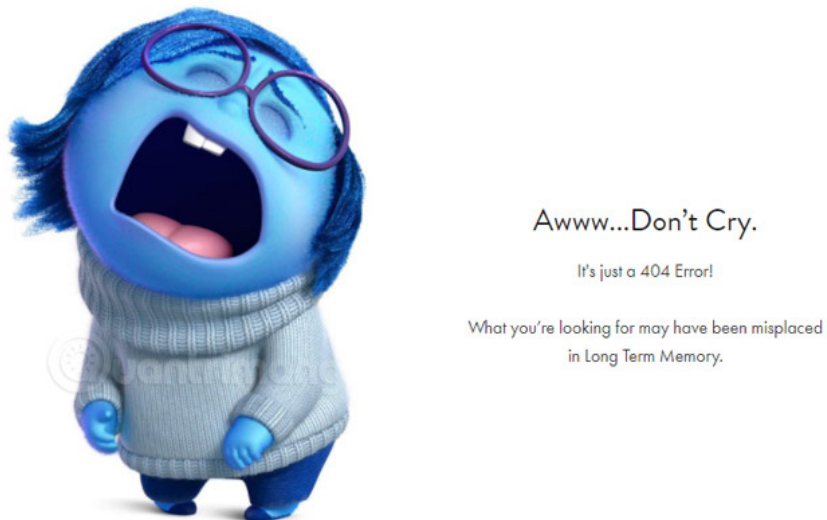

Error codes are necessary but not of top concern. 'When writing code for the new system, you won't spend much time writing long messages for the arising error situation that you discovered , ' Cailliau wrote. At that time, memory was also a problem, too long notice was impossible. 'Today's people cannot understand what 64KB memory programming is,' he wrote.

The solution is to create a series of numbers for errors, coming from 'programmers' unexpected ideas'. Client-side errors are in range 400 and '404' is assigned to an 'not found' error. '404 has nothing to do with a particular room or place at CERN,' Cailliau said. 'Absolutely a myth.'

When asked why this error made people care, Cailliau said 'I don't think 404 is so popular and I don't care either. Perhaps it is only because people love fairy tales rather than facts. ' He also said that this trait of humans was previously harmless, because personal effects were low and information spread slowly.

But now, thanks to the Internet, this feature has a dangerous power. He example of the past US presidential election, the deterioration of the EU, the political feedback on violence and gun use . Pixar's 404 error page wrote: 'Don't cry. It's just a 404 error!' beside the illustration of Inside Out character is crying.

Tumblr has another interesting way: 'There is nothing here. Unless you're looking for an error page, congratulations! You found it. ' (<http://alongseriesofsemirandomkeystrokes.tumblr.com/>)

Obviously, every time I surf the web and want to find a web address, which of us wants to get lost in the 404 room? But what is the perfect life?

The sun alone has only one, and Tumblr's father has only one in the world
