Drop Faster

Yes, dropping faster is the first expert tip on this list and the logic behind that is pretty simple. Those who have been playing Apex Legends for a while would understand how irritating it is that as soon as you get on the battlefield, either you could not find a good loot, or you and your squadmates get immediately picked off by another squad.?

The best way one can sort this out is by shortening their drop time and landing on the battlefield as soon as possible. And the best way to do that is by dropping in a straight line until you build a speed of 145, after glide to your preferred location and then start the drop again. By repeating this process, you will significantly reduce your drop time and get the first look at the loot in your area.

Only engage when you have the upper hand.

Apex Legends is a squad game, and it should be treated as a squad game as well. If you think that you can go solo and defeat every opponent yourself, that is just not going to happen. The expert advice to combat an enemy team or a player is to always have a numerical advantage in the combat, and if you do not have that, then it is better to not engage. Once you have a numerical advantage over an enemy, you can easily take them down without taking unnecessary risks.

Ping your teammates when looting.

Apex Legends allows the players to ping their teammates during the game. It is constructive if you use it to ping your teammate when you are going through the loot of a downed player. Pinging ammo, attachments and other consumables allows your teammate to select the best equipment for them and not waste their time going through the same loot again.

Break open the doors.

If you have been playing Apex Legends for a while, you must have come across a team that has just hunkered down inside a hut or a military storage room, making it difficult for you and your teammates to eliminate the target without suffering heavy causality in the process. Waiting them out is not good enough either, as other enemy squads could be circling you at the same time. So, what to do?

Well, there is a better alternative to just walking away and leaving your position, and that is breaking the door open. Yes, you can do that in Apex Legends. There are several ways one can destroy the door and make a pathway inside the holdout. One of the easiest ways you can do just that is by eliminating the hinges with few melees hits, or you can throw a frag grenade blowing up the door as well as anyone who is standing behind it.

Communicate as much as you can

One of the best things you can do to improve your winning rate in the Apex Legends is to communicate with your teammates as much as you can. If you see a suspicious movement, relay it to your teammate. If you see a better position for you and your teammate, you communicate with your teammate. The key to winning in Apex Legends is to be a better teammate and not just a better player. You can be an excellent royale battle first-person shooter, but if you cannot communicate effectively with your teammate, you just don't stand a chance to win in Apex Legends.

Get familiar with other weapons.

Different weapons have different recoil, range, movement restrictions, etc. You cannot just stay with a weapon no matter how much you like it. You are constantly evolving as a player in Apex Legends, and similarly, your weapon has to grow as well side by side. By trying out different weapons, you will get a better idea of which weapon is best suited for a certain playthrough, and then you can easily make a decision best suited for those circumstances.
