TipsMake.com - Everyday we often work with many text files, mostly Word. But one interesting thing still exists in the * .docx format of Microsoft Office and Open Office that many people know: it is not really a single file. There is also an XML file and some other components to create a complete Word file. We can completely 'discover' the inside manually, similar to the * .zip file. In fact, this process is very useful, because we can restore data from * .docx file, extract audio file and image .

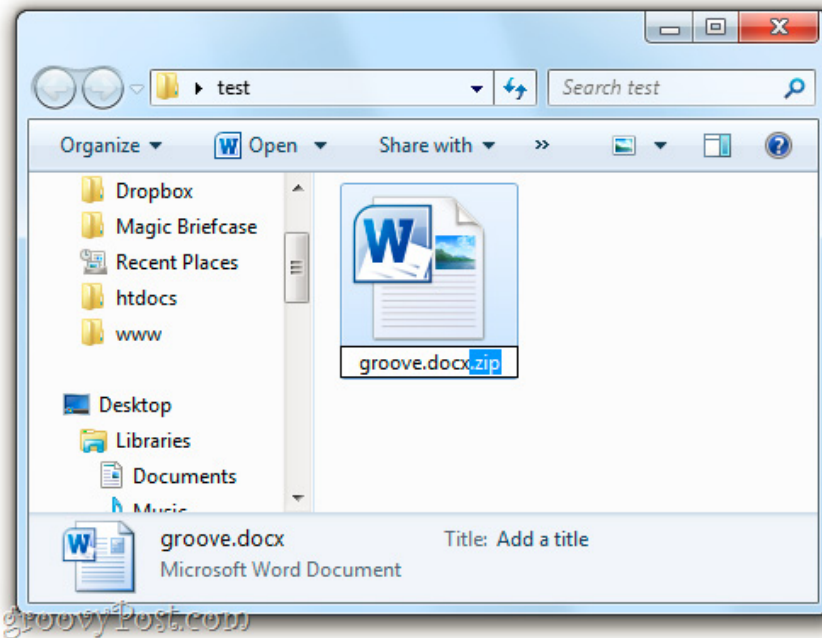

First, look for any * .docx file on your computer:

Right-click and select Rename :

Add .zip to the back and press Enter :

When Windows displays the bulletin board as shown below, you select Yes:

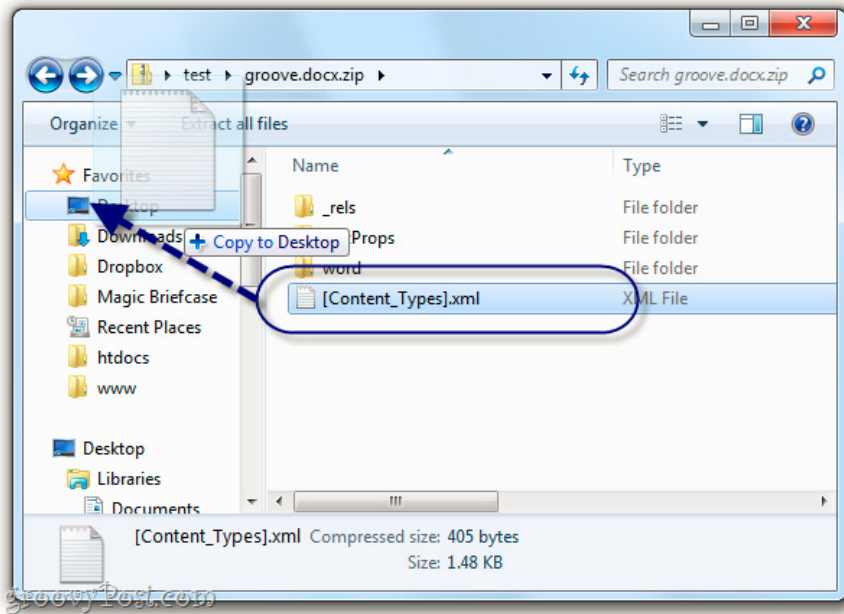

N?u b?n thay ??i m?t t?p tin tên t?p tin, t?p tin có th? thì không có B?n có ch?c mu?n thay ??i nó?

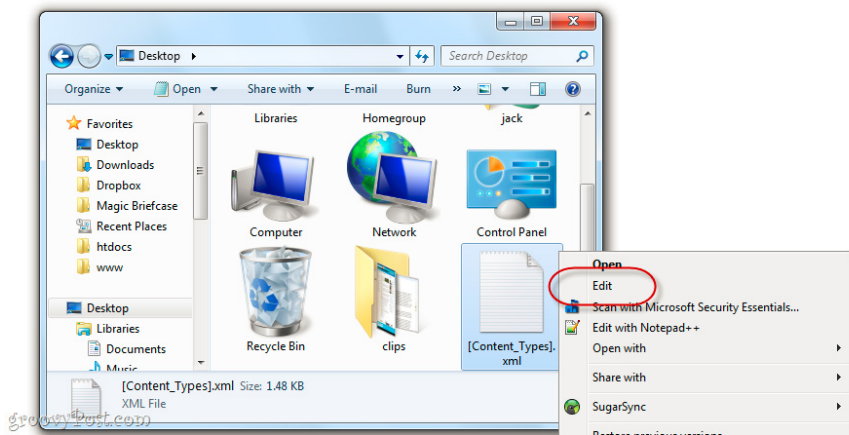

Meanwhile, the file's icon will change to a compressed file. Double click to open:

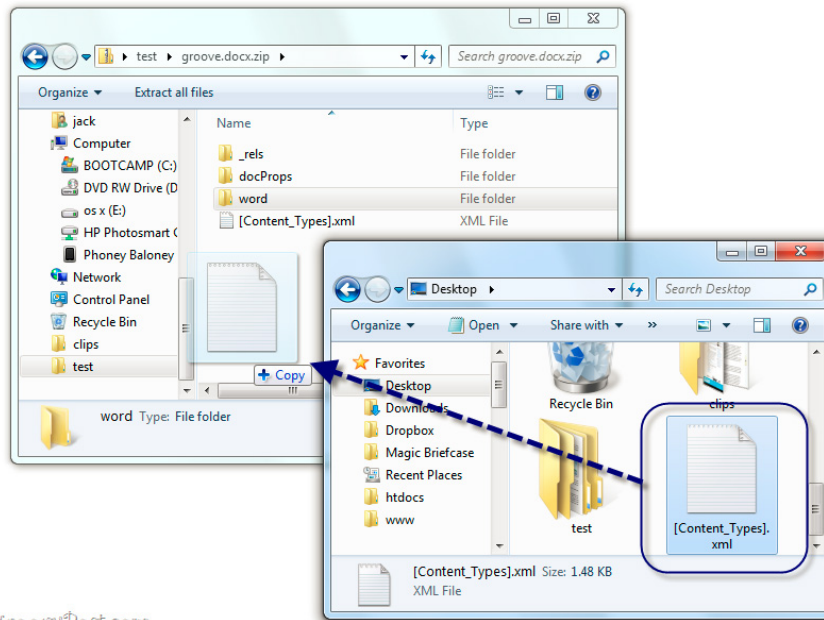

Inside, we will see the whole 'interior' of that * .docx file, there are several folders like _rels, docProps and word. If you want to correct any * .xml file, you must extract a certain folder, such as Desktop:

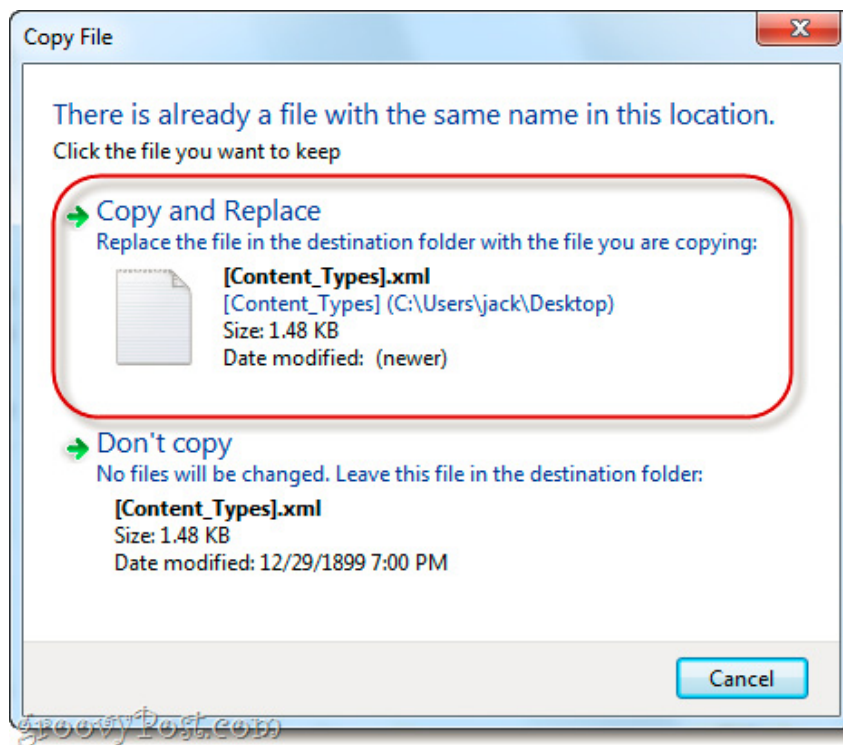

Then, use a certain text editing program like Notepad to start editing:

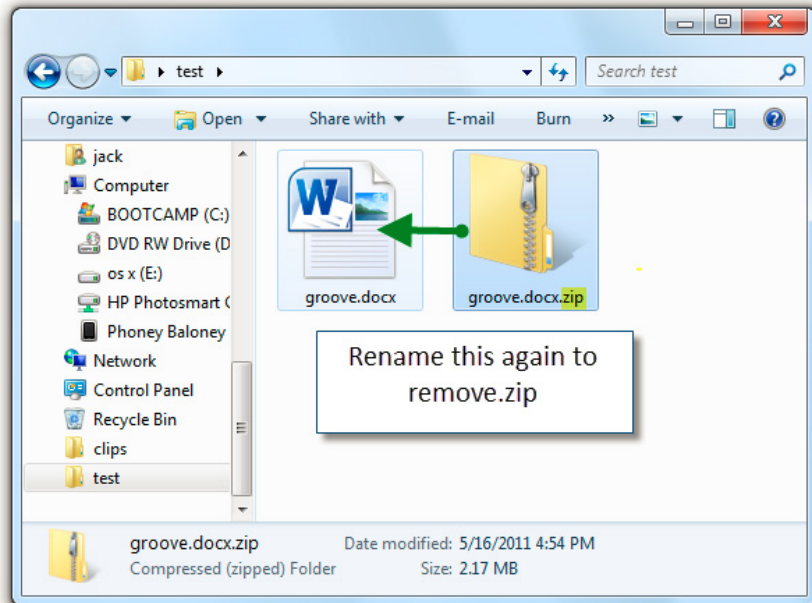

After finishing, drag and drop back to the original folder:

When Windows displays the following warning information, select Copy and Replace:

And change the name back to the original one (delete the .zip section):

Good luck!
