

Explore inside money printing plants of countries around the world

In countries like the US, China or Russia, every money printing process is strictly controlled and quality assured.

In countries like the US, China or Russia, every money printing process is strictly controlled and quality assured.

BEP - US Bureau of Engraving and Printing is a national money printer, responsible for designing and printing all US banknotes, located on Road 14 and Road C, southwest of Washington, DC US money-printing factories are usually open to visitors, not as secure as in many countries.

(Photo: Washington, DC).

The BEP factory started money printing activities more than 150 years ago. It is estimated that BEP prints $ 500 million a day.

The printing of American money is completely different from design to ink and paper.

(Photo: Moneyfactory).

The dollar looks and feels differently because of the composition of printed paper including 75 percent cotton and 25 percent linen.

(Photo: Moneyfactory).

The back of the notes will be printed first.

(Photo: Washington, DC).

After the back is finished printing, the technician starts checking for errors.

(Photo: Moneyfactory).

The notes are then left dry for 3 days before being printed on the front.

(Photo: Moneyfactory).

Chengdu Money Printing Factory, a member of China National Money Printing and Printing Group, is located in Sichuan Province.

(Photo: West China Metropolis Daily).

China's yuan production process goes through 10 steps. The first stage is to choose paper.

(Photo: Gizmochina).

The main ingredient of paper to print Chinese money is cotton.

(Photo: West China Metropolis Daily).

Workers check the quality of money printing paper before being sent to the machine to print money.

(Photo: Gizmochina).

After successful printing, money will have to go through a quality inspection.

(Photo: Gizmochina).

In Russia, the special agency undertook the task of printing the country's banknotes and coins as Perm's factory (Goznak).

(Photo: sputniknews).

Blank sheets of paper that are used to print money are specially formulated.

(Photo: Sputniknews).

The factory staff will check the quality carefully after each stage.

(Photo: Sputniknews).

Money is printed on large paper sizes, then transferred to a cutting machine to become a standard banknote.

(Photo: Sputniknews).

1. Discover inside the planet's largest yacht, it can serve nearly 7,000 passengers
2. Discover Russia's largest helicopter Mi-26, carrying both mammoth fossils

You finished reading the article "Explore inside money printing plants of countries around the world" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.