

Facebook provides background music for videos and 360 video making tools

In the latest announcement, Facebook will provide a repertoire of background music inserted into videos with a variety of genres that you don't need to worry about copyright issues, and a 360-degree Facebook video support tool.

According to the latest information, Facebook will release the Sound Collection tool , which gathers songs with a variety of genres so you can insert video content. Besides, a set of Facebook 360 video making tools will also be provided in the upcoming upgrade.

Facebook has long tightened copyright issues. When it detects a video with any copyrighted audio, Facebook will ask the user to remove the video or Facebook will automatically block it. For those who regularly make videos on Facebook, finding background music inserted into videos is not easy and easy because of copyright issues. However, with this new update we can completely select multiple categories in the Sound Collection Facebook section, without paying royalties or copyright infringement.

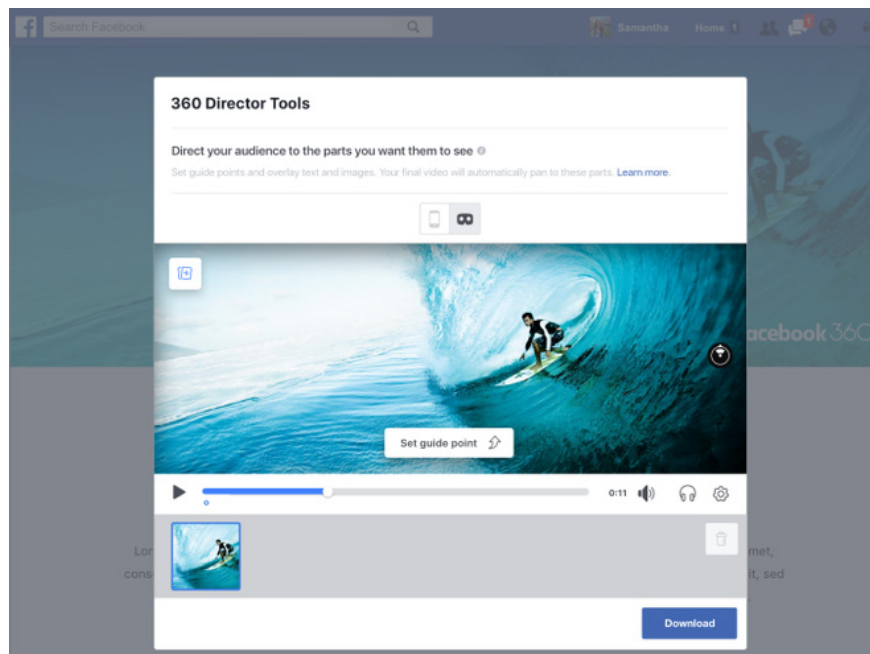

Beginning in 2015 under the New YorkTimes newspaper, Facebook contacted many well-known record labels for the purpose of acquiring popular songs. So, you can choose any song from hip hop, pop, jazz, country, . and maybe more in the future when expanding the Sound Collection sound collection.

In addition, Facebook will also provide a support for making 360 videos on Facebook. Currently, Facebook has just stopped allowing to put 360-degree photos of Facebook and post 360-degree photos on Facebook.

And a Facebook group called 360 Community - 360 Comunity has studied a tool to help users make their own 360-degree videos on Facebook.

Facebook will show you how to make 360-degree video tutorials, as well as how to handle your own videos so you can create your own 360-degree videos right on Facebook. Once you have a video with a 360-degree rotation, users can insert audio into the video in the Sound Collection collection.

In addition, if you do not have a device to record a video 360, you can borrow the device from the 360 ?? Community, such as GoPro Fusion or ZCam S1, as long as it is okay to upload the video to Facebook.

The new notification change from Facebook not only gives users the open space to freely create and process videos, but also can develop Facebook's platform. Thus, Facebook will become a strong competitor of YouTube in the video making platform.

See also: How to download Facebook videos to computers quickly without software

You finished reading the article "Facebook provides background music for videos and 360 video making tools" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
