

Facebook tested the downvote button in place of the dislike button to prevent comments from adversely affecting the community

Facebook has just confirmed testing a new feature, allowing 'downvote comments.

Facebook has just confirmed that it is testing a new feature, allowing comments to "downvote." The downvote button is not a dislike button, but many people still want to appear on Facebook.

This button only appears on comments and acts as a warning button to help Facebook evaluate inappropriate content, adversely affect the community, prevent fake information, bad content.

The number of downvote times will not show up because Facebook does not want this button to be abused to bully others. Currently, there are only a few users in the United States that try to download "but may be popular worldwide if it delivers positive results.

See more:

1. Facebook cover photo greeting Spring Mau Tu Spring 2018
2. How to download closed Facebook videos
3. Fix the error of not being able to access Facebook on Android
4. How to create avatar Facebook Tet Mau Tuat 2018

You finished reading the article "Facebook tested the downvote button in place of the dislike button to prevent comments from adversely affecting the community" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

