

Facebook will have an anonymous 'surfing' feature

Soon, Facebook users will be comfortable operating on this social network without worrying about being followed by others.

Soon, Facebook users will be comfortable operating on this social network without worrying about being followed by others.

This is the latest leak information related to Facebook's security features. Previously, all activities of a Facebooker could be tracked by anyone on the friends list. For example, the " owl " clicking on the favorite button or sending a comment will always show in the sticker on the right of the interface. Particularly worrisome in the case of Facebooker being put on a buddy list by another person.

Facebook will enhance anonymous surfing.

Because of these problems, many people expressed their reluctance to join Facebook, did not even dare to write status or like, comment on a problem at all, despite being very sympathetic to that status. In another aspect, setting hidden status, images provided by Facebook cannot satisfy users' security needs.

Therefore, in the future Facebook will provide anonymous surfing feature so that users no longer worry about the above problems, such as favorite activities will not be present to everyone's eyes.

It is not clear how Facebook will provide this feature, but it is possible that the Whisper application that Facebook intends to own will help them implement the idea.

You finished reading the article "Facebook will have an anonymous 'surfing' feature" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

