

Fascinated with the idea of ??Windows 10, even the most fastidious people also have to love this operating system

It is hard not to love the interesting idea about this Windows 10 operating system, because the design style is bold Fluent Design and improvements will surely make Windows 10 users happy.

Recently, a UI / UX designer named Genrole Caspe has just introduced an interesting idea about Windows 10. This will certainly be an interesting suggestion for Microsoft to better improve its operating system. .

The idea of ??Genrole Caspe is simply called "Re-imagining the Windows Experience". This is a collection of suggestions to tweak the interface and features of Windows 10, making this operating system more attractive.

As can be seen in the idea of ??Genrole Caspe, the Fluent Design language seems to be promoted and more intuitive. In particular, the taskbar is more clearly divided instead of aggregated as today.

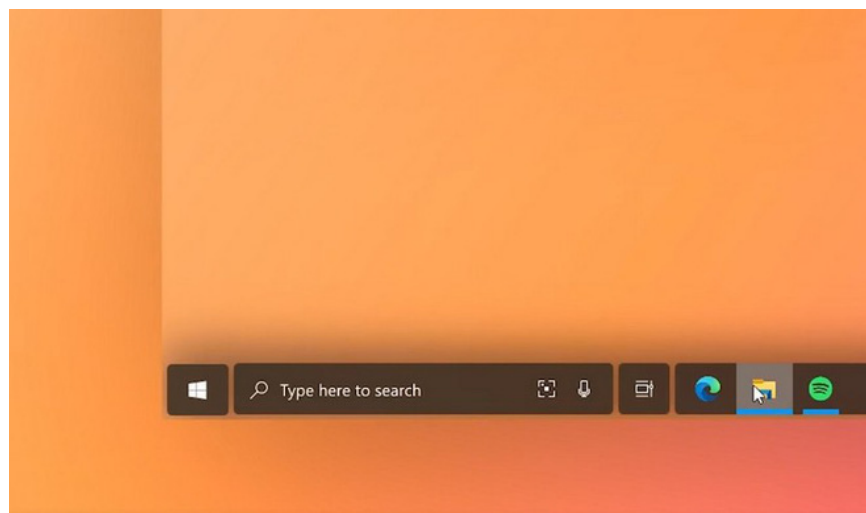

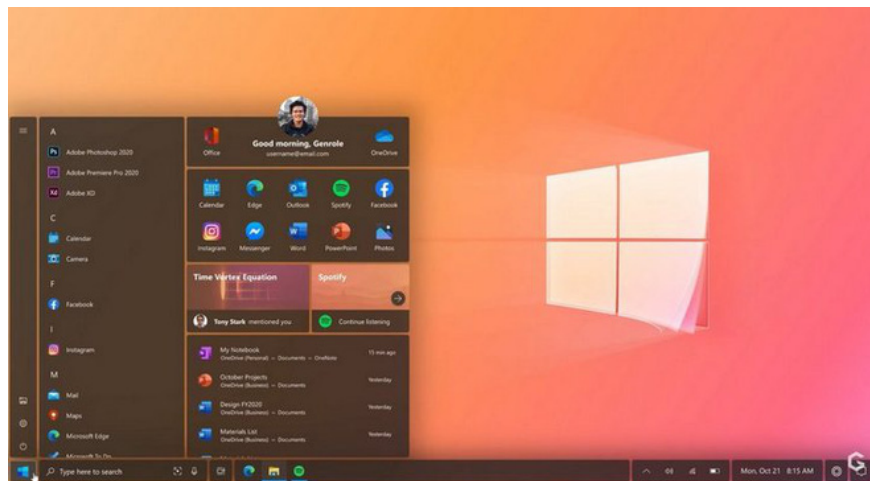

Virtual assistant Cortana will have a new home in the lower right corner, a change being considered by Microsoft and the Start Menu has been completely redesigned, organized and divided more clearly.

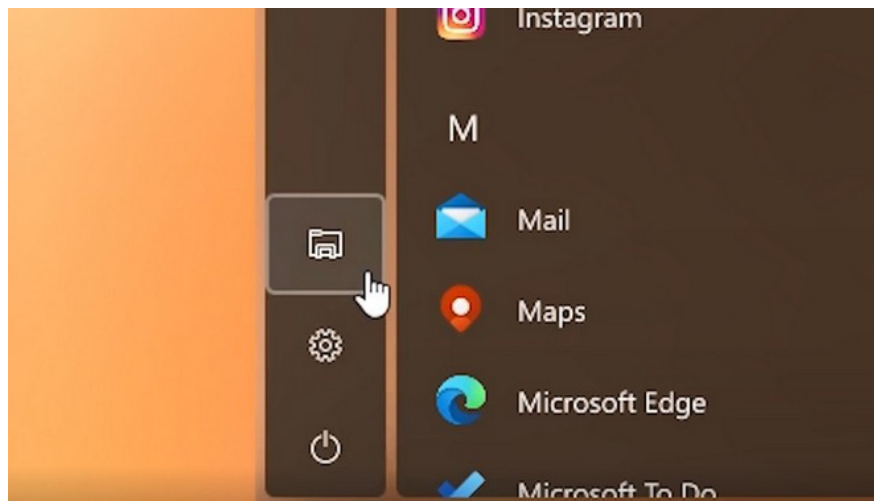

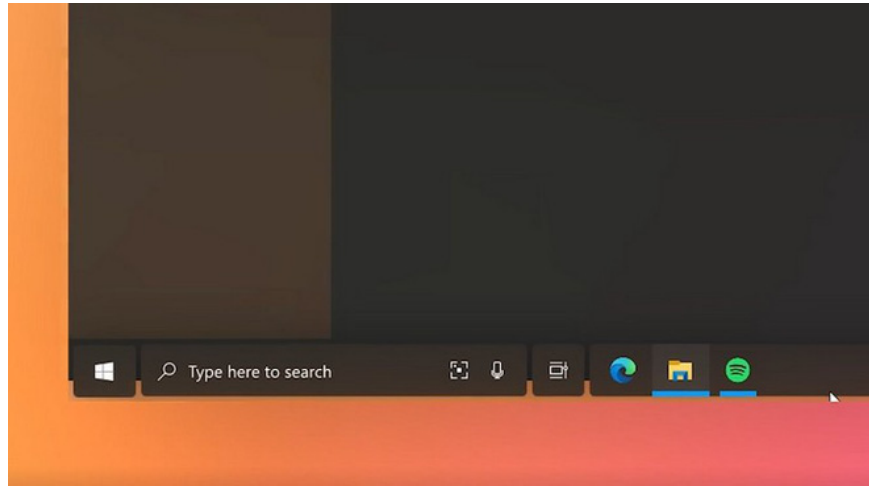

Widgets on the Start Menu

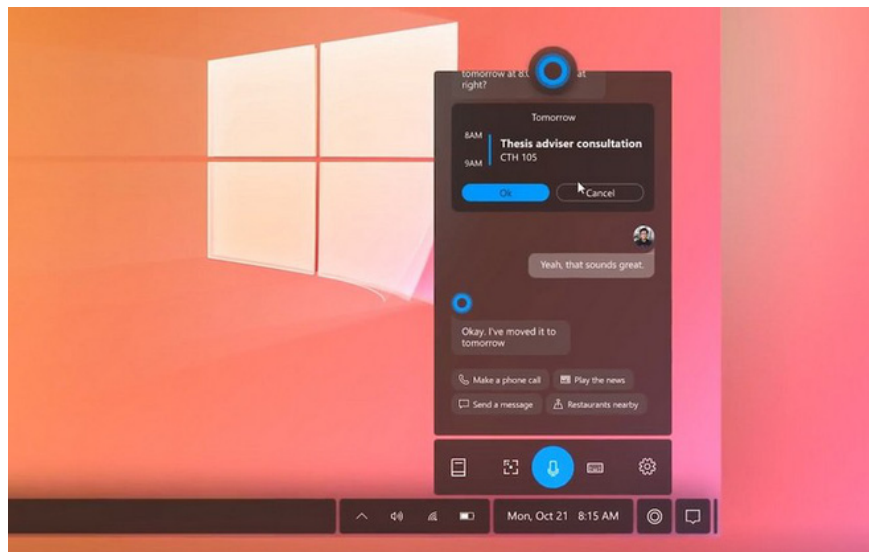

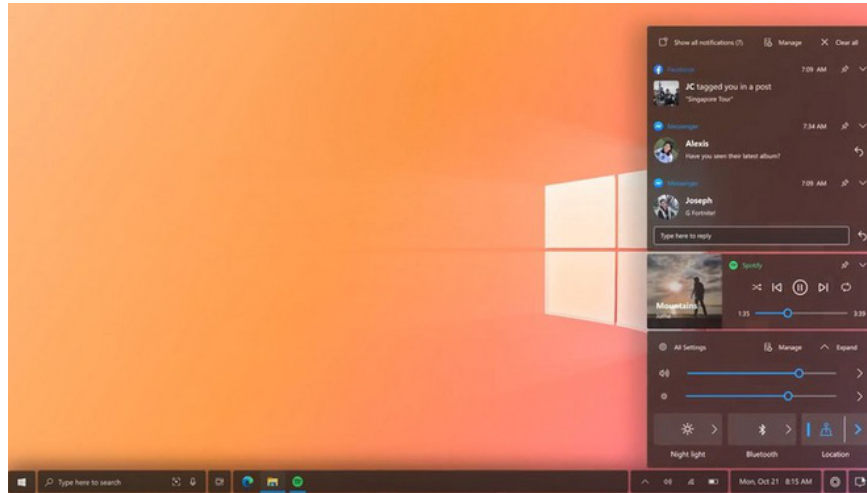

The new Live Tiles in this idea are called with an interesting name, which is "app widgets". These apps allow interactivity right from the Launcher without opening them.

In fact, Microsoft is planning to remove the Live Tiles at some point in the future because it doesn't really work as Microsoft expected.

And with Genrole Caspe's idea, this is definitely not the best thing to have on Windows 10. And certainly Windows 10 will never be the same idea. But this idea will bring many interesting suggestions for Microsoft in developing Windows 10.

Designer Genrole Caspe said he was researching some other ideas about Windows 10. But for now, the idea of ??Genrole Caspe may be considered the most interesting about Windows 10.
