

Fear of the Internet is bad for feng shui, cutting off 8 optical cable lines across the house, causing 8000 households to lose their lives

A woman in An Duong, China has cut off 8 fiber-optic cables that passed through her house for a while because she feared that the network would be bad for her feng shui. This action made 8000 households unable to connect to the Internet in a day.

A woman in An Duong, China, cut a length of eight fiber-optic cables through the house because she feared that the network would be bad for her feng shui. This action made 8000 households unable to connect to the Internet in a day.

According to the concept of many people, feng shui (fengshui) is a collection of a series of terrain features around the terrain such as wind direction, air direction, water circuit, shape, layout layout, construction space . . affects the life and destiny of people.

The woman believes that the network line generates electricity from negative effects on health, especially the brain. So she cut off all the wires she had through the house to improve . feng shui for the family.

Taking this reckless action, 8000 households in An Duong cannot use the Internet and related services. No feng shui improvement has been seen, but this woman has faced charges of sabotaging public property.

See more:

1. How to connect the network with a bug
2. 3 steps of fast, standard network wiring
3. How to connect the network between two laptops using a network cable

You finished reading the article "Fear of the Internet is bad for feng shui, cutting off 8 optical cable lines across the house, causing 8000 households to lose their lives" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---