

Firefox 24 Beta adds tab closures with the right mouse button

Just days after Firefox 23 was officially released, Mozilla unexpectedly released Firefox 24 beta with a host of interesting features added.

Just days after Firefox 23 was officially released, Mozilla unexpectedly released Firefox 24 beta with a host of interesting features added.

According to Softpedia, with the version running on the computer, there are not many major changes from Firefox 23 with the browser panel feature (Browser Console) and a new feature for web developers.

In Firefox 24 beta, this software is equipped with a tab closing feature in the right-click menu. This feature makes it easy for users to close a bunch of unnecessary tabs at the same time except for the current tab being accessed.

This is not the first time this idea has been applied to web browsers, Chrome can also do this if users install some add-ons.

You finished reading the article "Firefox 24 Beta adds tab closures with the right mouse button" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.