

Firefox - Disable annoying ads on YouTube

Ads often appear as soon as you access YouTube and will never go away unless you manually disable them. This article will guide you on how to turn off these annoying ads on YouTube using the Firefox browser.

Advertising is an indispensable part of modern society; it's everywhere around you, even on the internet. There's no denying the immense power and benefits of advertising. However, sometimes overuse of ads can be annoying, and at those times, you just want to block them. When you're enjoying a movie or a song and ads pop up, obscuring the picture or text, it can be very irritating, and here's a solution.

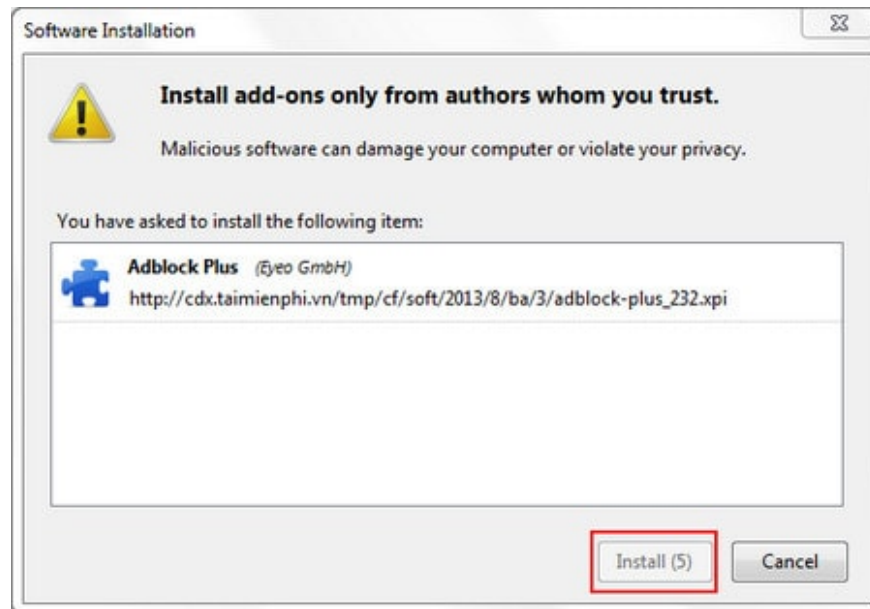

Previously, in an article, TipsMake guided you on how to block YouTube ads on Chrome. In this article, we will guide you on how to do the same on the Mozilla Firefox browser.

How to turn off ads on YouTube with Firefox:

Step 1 : Download and install the Adblock Plus add-on or the YouTube Center script. You can download Adblock Plus for Firefox.

Step 2: A pop-up window will appear, click Install to install this add-on. Wait about 5 seconds --> Install Now

Step 3 : Activate one or all three available functions:

- Malware Blocking : Blocks malware that may infect your system during web browsing.
- Remove Social Media Buttons : Prevents others from tracking your web browsing, similar to disabling the Remove button on Facebook.
- Disable Tracking : Disables ads on websites. If you want to disable ads on YouTube, select the Disable Tracking function by clicking to switch from Off to On .

Once you're done, try watching a video on YouTube to see if all the ads have been removed.

By disabling annoying ads on YouTube, you can comfortably watch videos and movies without being bothered by ads. And of course, this isn't just for Firefox; if you're using Chrome to browse the web or frequently use Google Chrome as your default browser, you should also know how to block ads on Chrome. Refer to our guide on how to block ads on Chrome and follow the instructions.
