

Galaxy Fold 2 will be launched in early 2020 with an extremely reasonable price

Samsung is said to be developing a second version of its popular foldable Galaxy Fold phone.

Samsung is said to be developing the second version of the popular Galaxy Fold folding phone - the device that has caused a worldwide fever when it was introduced at CES 2019, and has just been officially launched at the end of the year. last September.

According to information leaked from the 'holy leak' Ishan Agarwal, Galaxy Fold 2 will certainly be significantly cheaper than its predecessor, but will still be equipped with countless new technologies, at the same time. Relatively thorough recovery of some disadvantages of the previous version.

More specifically, Galaxy Fold 2 has model number SM-F700F and will be sold by Samsung in many markets instead of just limited to some traditional markets of the Galaxy Fold. Users in the US, Canada, China, India, South Korea and the EU will be able to buy Galaxy Fold at a more favorable price. There will be only one option of internal memory - 256GB, along with 2 versions of white, black and purple.

Take a look at some of the notable improvements likely to appear on the Galaxy Fold 2. Samsung will cover on the device's screen a layer of Polyimide plastic film with flexibility and excellent high temperature resistance to increase durability for panels, especially in open areas. There are also rumors that Samsung will equip this new device with a screen size up to 8.1 inches, much larger than 6.7 inches on the first-generation Galaxy Fold. This screen will be enhanced protection thanks to ultra-thin tempered glass UTG with a thickness of only 0.1 mm with extremely good scratch resistance.

According to ET News's prediction, the price of the Galaxy Fold 2 will be around $ 1,500 (equivalent to 35 million), and hit shelves in April next year, coinciding with the launch of the Galaxy S11.

The Korean manufacturer is expected to sell at least 6 million foldable smartphones by 2020, and the launch of the Galaxy Fold 2 at a more affordable price will be a key factor in helping Samsung achieve its goal. this pepper.
