

Genshin Impact: Yae Miko is about to be restored to its original strength by miHoYo

After being criticized by fans for nefting Yae Miko's power in the Genshin Impact 2.6 update, miHoYo has spoken up to admit her mistake.

On March 30, miHoYo officially released the Genshin Impact 2.6 update and also released some tweaks to Yae Miko's power stat.

Specifically, this developer has made some adjustments to make Yae Miko's Lightning turrets only focus on attacking the nearest target, causing Yae's damage and ability to create Lightning seal on nearby opponents. reduced to about 1/3 compared to the original. Not only that, it also cancels the effect of increasing the attack range of the Palace of Destiny 2.

Of course, the above negative changes of miHoYo have received a lot of criticism from fans. Most think that this is an unnecessary power neft for Yae Miko - a 5-star character who was already underrated at the time of his release.

Genshin Impact
@GenshinImpact

...

Rollback: Fix to Yae Miko's Targeting Mechanic

Greetings, dear Travelers.

We will roll back the Yae Miko targeting fix in an update on 2022/04/06. Other targeting-related changes will remain in effect.

View details here:

hoiylab.com/article_pre/69...

Fortunately, miHoYo is also not a conservative studio, so it was quick to admit its mistake when making the above unreasonable changes, and announced that it would return the original power to Yae Miko in a short time. patch on the upcoming 6/4/2022 and compensate 100 Origin Stones for all gamers.

To get the above 100 Primers, you just need to reach Adventure Rank 5 or higher by April 6, 2022. Note that the message containing the compensation reward will expire on April 9, 2022.

You finished reading the article "Genshin Impact: Yae Miko is about to be restored to its original strength by miHoYo" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.