

Gmail in China works again

According to the Engadget site, after more than 2 days of being blocked from access in China, Google's Gmail email service has been restored.

According to the Engadget site, after more than 2 days of being blocked from access in China, Google's Gmail email service has been restored.

Gmail has been restored in China

According to Neowin, on December 31, access to Gmail in China, despite being restored, still has many times when the connection is difficult and slow to log in.

Google said that their Gmail service had no problems. On the Chinese side, the regulator has not stated why Gmail cannot access it for more than 2 days.

It is known that the inability to access Gmail recently is the biggest problem ever of this service in the Chinese market.

You finished reading the article "Gmail in China works again" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.