

Google confirmed the release of Android 5.0 Lollipop in early November 2014

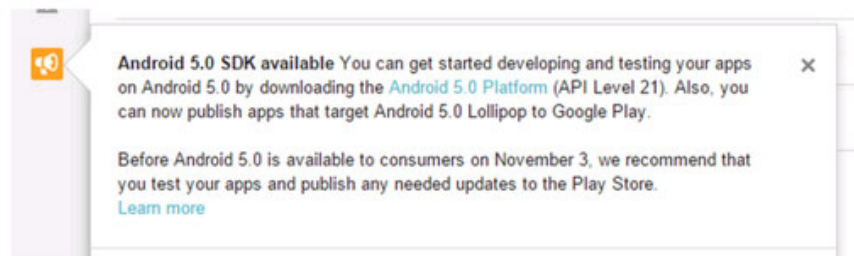

Google has just confirmed it will release Android 5.0 Lollipop on November 3 in a report for developers. The notice notes developers that Android 5.0 SDK is available for download.

Google has just confirmed it will release Android 5.0 Lollipop on November 3 in a report for developers.

The notice notes developers that Android 5.0 SDK is available to download, test and develop Lollipop apps on Google Play.

Google also confirmed that Android 5.0 Lollipop will be available to users on November 3. The company will update Android 5.0 Lollipop for its devices, including Nexus 9, Nexus 6, Nexus 7 and 10 during the first day of release.

Google is also said to be setting up to officially launch Android Wear 2.0, the latest version of the Android wearable device platform on November 3.

You finished reading the article "Google confirmed the release of Android 5.0 Lollipop in early November 2014" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
