

Google finally revealed the origin of the legendary T-rex dinosaur when the computer lost its network connection

Celebrating the fourth birthday of the T-rex dinosaur on Chrome, Google finally revealed the origin of this lovely dinosaur.

Most Internet users are familiar with the appearance of the T-rex dinosaur every time the computer is disconnected from the Internet. In fact, this mini-game has become a fun entertainment to help users kill time while waiting for the Internet to work again.

How to play the game is easy, players just need to press the spacebar (Spacebar), or the up arrow key of the computer keyboard to control the dinosaur to jump up to avoid the cactus on the way. The more dinosaurs go, the higher the score. If unfortunately touch the cactus, the game will end.

Celebrating the fourth birthday of the T-rex dinosaur on Chrome, Google finally revealed the origin of this lovely dinosaur.

Sebastien Gabriel, designer Chrome said, the idea of creating a T-rex dinosaur is to bring the user back to 'prehistoric times', when wifi has not yet appeared and they can only access the Internet at some locations. Points like: home, school, workplace and Internet cafes.

The first T-rex was named "Project Bolan", similar to the name of the lead singer in the rock band glam T-Rex in 1970, Marc Bolan.

Alan Bettes, Google's senior designer, said they had a lot of difficulties in developing this mini game, especially the movement for the T-rex dinosaur. Initially they intended to give this dinosaur a kick or would scream to signal it was still alive. But finally the operation of the T-rex dinosaur was decided to only run, bend down and jump.

Mini T-rex dinosaur game was released by Google in September 2014 and only appeared on certain platforms. After that, it was redesigned to work on more devices.

Since its launch, T-rex has received the love of many users all over the world. According to Edward Jung, Chrome's engineer, there are 270 million mini-games of the T-rex dinosaur game every month (including on desktops and mobile devices), mostly in markets that are not worth it. reliable like India, Brazil, Indonesia and Mexico.

Currently, even without losing Internet connection, users can play mini T-rex dinosaur game by typing chrome://dino in Chrome's address bar, you can immediately unleash your battle. T-rex dinosaur with full screen mode.

In addition, the latest version of the T-rex dinosaur on the occasion of 4-year-old birthday will be added a cake, balloons and a birthday hat. And another interesting detail about this mini game T-rex dinosaur is that the game will end after 17 million years of playing (the time when dinosaurs live on Earth), so defeating this game is real Feasibility.

See more:

1. Can play the game on the website address bar, have you tried it?
2. Forget the keyboard and mouse, just a trumpet this guy can kill the monsters in the game "Doom"
3. If you successfully break this island, this super-difficult game will give you 5000 USD

You finished reading the article "Google finally revealed the origin of the legendary T-rex dinosaur when the computer lost its network connection" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.