

Google has changed the interface and display on the search page, making users very uncomfortable

Google search page has changed the interface and display of results, adding icons of search results sites, and the link is placed above the title.

Google search page has changed the interface and display of results, adding icons of search results sites, and the link is placed above the title. The purpose of this change is to help Google users know where that information comes from, whether it is fake or trusted. Previously, Google had similar changes on the mobile search page.

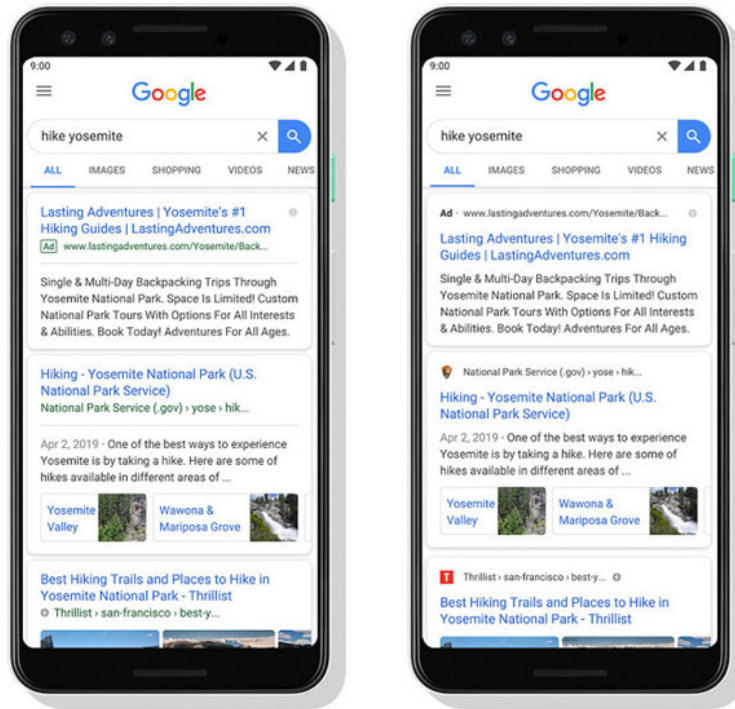

The first thing that catches attention of users when looking at the new interface on Google search is the website logos and links because they stand out at the top. Next is the article's title with a larger font size.

The way the search results appear on the Google computer browser page has changed.

However, according to user reviews, this change on the Google search page does not improve the user experience, but also confusing and distracting. It is not as simple and neat as the previous interface.

It is a fact that, compared to the icons or see where the news source comes from, users are still more interested in the search results and whether the titles match the content they search.

How to display on the Google search page on mobile, old (left) and new (right).

How would you rate the new Google change, do you like the way this icon and link appears? Leave your comments in the comments at the end of the article.

1. Desktop Mode simulation application of Android 10 has been released on Google Play
2. Google can completely ban your account, please protect yourself before it's too late

You finished reading the article "Google has changed the interface and display on the search page, making users very uncomfortable" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.