

Google launched new promotional videos on Android Wear

It seems that Google is ready for 'rush hour' with a series of ads on Android Wear. The four videos that appeared on Android's official Youtube channel show the usefulness of smart watches running the latest operating system for smart wearable devices.

It seems that Google is ready for 'rush hour' with a series of ads on Android Wear. The four videos that appeared on Android's official Youtube channel show the usefulness of smart watches running the latest operating system for smart wearable devices.

Whether you're in a desert sanctuary in Africa, go out for a party, or even if you're playing surfing at sea.

All the four videos mentioned cover only three words ' at a glance ' to reveal the interesting things that the device has to offer. The video above is the longest piece of the ad that is aggregated from the other three segments.

As you might expect, the Moto 360 , LG G Watch and Samsung Gear Live all play prominently in the ads below:

Maybe this is a message from Google for the enthusiasts of smart watches running will bring really useful and interesting things.

After watching the video you will think about, please let us know.

You finished reading the article "Google launched new promotional videos on Android Wear" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---