

Google officially launched a handy App Launcher for Chrome users

Although there isn't any official from Google, it seems that the search giant has released the official version (stable version for end users) of App Launcher on Chrome.

Although there isn't any official from Google, it seems that the search giant has released the official version (stable version for end users) of App Launcher on Chrome.

App Launcher on Chrome is a launcher that contains Google-developed web apps, which users have installed on Chrome like Gmail, YouTube, Maps .

After installation, this launcher will appear in the taskbar (taskbar) of the computer. When you click on, you will be able to quickly access web applications, even if Chrome is closed. Currently this launcher has only been released to Windows users, it is unclear when Google will launch this new launcher for Mac and Linux.

You finished reading the article "Google officially launched a handy App Launcher for Chrome users" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
