

Google released Google Chrome 26

This morning (March 27), Google officially launched Google Chrome version 26, with the full code name Google Chrome 26.0.1410.43 for Windows, Mac and Linux operating systems.

This morning (March 27), Google officially launched Google Chrome version 26, with the full code name Google Chrome 26.0.1410.43 for Windows, Mac and Linux operating systems.

In this new version, Google has fixed many security-related errors. This new feature added to this version of Google Chrome 26 includes adding "Ask Google for suggestions" lines (ask Google for suggestions) to help you learn more about automatic spelling checking.

Another nice feature that has been upgraded for Windows is browser support for many users . Each user will be able to set up his own icon, then Google will create a "shortcut user" right at the desktop. Each user's history and settings are separate.

Readers can download the new version of Google Chrome here . If you are using Google Chrome browser, it will automatically update, you do not have to do anything more.

You finished reading the article "Google released Google Chrome 26" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.