

Google released the YouTube TV application for Apple TV and Roku

According to the announcement with a tease on Twitter, Google has just released an Apple TV app for YouTube TV, offering owners of fourth-generation technology Apple TV and Apple TV 4K the best way to enjoy TV. Over-the-top of YouTube.

As announced on Twitter, Google has just released a YouTube TV app for Apple TV, which gives fourth-generation Apple TV users and Apple TV 4K the best solution to enjoy over-the TV programs. -top (Apps and content like audio, video, provided on the Internet platform) of YouTube. YouTube TV was announced at the end of February 2017 and will be released in April, starting in five cities.

At a monthly fee of $ 35, YouTube TV includes more than 50 channels, as well as the option to purchase Showtime's own channel, Fox Soccer Plus, Shudder and Sundance Now for between $ 5 and $ 15 per channel. In addition to allowing six user accounts with 3 streams simultaneously, Google also launched DVR features with unlimited recording time, unlimited streams in the US.

YouTube TV can be downloaded directly from Apple TV's integrated app store, with subscriptions available as in-app purchases; The iOS version of the app can be found in the App Store on iOS devices.

Google also released a version of YouTube TV app for Roku device with similar features and prices, extending the availability of the YouTube Go application to make it 'offline' view for Android users in developing countries. .

See more:

1. The YouTube app on Android TV is redesigned

2. The Google for Android application is about to edit and share screenshots
3. YouTube Live will support IFTTT, geotagging and many new improvements

You finished reading the article "Google released the YouTube TV application for Apple TV and Roku" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
