

Google Translation: People translate tools automatically

The new Google Translation Center service will connect people who need to translate documents around the world with experts hired by Google to do so, instead of having to resort to computer algorithms for translation like today.

The new Google Translation Center service will connect people who need to translate documents around the world with experts hired by Google to do so, instead of having to resort to computer algorithms for translation like today.

Google said this measure would remove the language barrier and limitations of automated translation tools.

The Google Translation Center interface and the document page for translation. Photo: Blogscoped .

Users only need to post documents, choose from more than 40 languages ??and choose a Google expert or volunteer. If the translator approves the proposal, the user will receive the translation in the fastest time possible.

The Google Translation Center is only available for program members to test the Google's Trusted Tester Program. The company hopes human participation will help them improve future translation algorithms.

Google has not disclosed the payment for each translator nor does it require anything from the user.

You finished reading the article "Google Translation: People translate tools automatically" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.