

Google went to Chromebook Pixel LTE from early April

Since its launch in February, the LTE version of the Chromebook Pixel touchscreen laptop has not appeared on store shelves.

Since its launch in February, the LTE version of the Chromebook Pixel touchscreen laptop has not appeared on store shelves.

However, the updated content on the Google Play store on March 25 revealed that the $ 1,449 computer model said on the LTE version will be available to customers since April 8.

The LTE version of Chromebook Pixel is compatible with Verizon's high-speed network, with a configuration of 64GB solid-state hard drive, while the WiFi-only version sells for $ 1,299 and has 32GB of internal memory.

Both versions have a 12.85-inch touch screen with a huge resolution of 2,560x1,700, using a Core i5 processor with 1.8GHz speed, 4GB of RAM, integrated HD Graphics 4000, There is a microSD card slot and 2 USB ports.

In addition, Google also offers preferential Chromebook Pixel LTE buyers to receive 100MB of free data every month for two years.

You finished reading the article "Google went to Chromebook Pixel LTE from early April" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.