

Google will death the old Gmail interface, forcing users to use the new interface

Currently, users can still choose to use between the familiar old interface or the new interface. However, in the next few months, Google will death the old Gmail interface and force users to use the new interface.

Google has introduced the new Gmail interface, along with many useful features to users since mid-April. Since then, users can still choose to use between the old familiar interface or the new interface. However, in the next few months, Google will death the old Gmail interface and force users to use the new interface.

The subject of this change will first be the G Suite user, Gmail users who sign up through the company or an organization.

G Suite administrators will have several months to prepare and notify their members about changing the new Gmail interface. The deadline for users to switch to the new interface will be in October, and then Google will turn off the old interface option.

Google will also apply this change to regular Gmail users in the next few months.

See more:

1. 9 Gmail tips on the new interface you should know
2. How to update the new Gmail interface if your Gmail has not been upgraded
3. How to find contacts in new Gmail

4. How to access Contacts on the new Gmail interface
5. Type "@" to insert new recipients anywhere in Gmail

You finished reading the article "Google will death the old Gmail interface, forcing users to use the new interface" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.