

Google will have a Metro version of Chrome

Google has confirmed that it is developing a Metro-style Chrome version for Windows 8 operating system.

A Google spokeswoman has just confirmed that they are developing a Metro-style Chrome version for Windows 8 operating system.

This version will rely on Google's standard desktop web browser, not in the style of mobile Android browser.

The Google representative expressed: ' Our goal is to be able to bring a safe, simple and high-speed Chrome experience to users on all different platforms, including desktop and Metro versions on Windows. 8. In addition, Chrome Metro version will be enhanced with touch support . '

The information was released by Google just a month after Mozilla announced the Metro-style Firefox browser version for Windows 8.

As planned, this highly anticipated Microsoft operating system will be released later this year.

You finished reading the article "Google will have a Metro version of Chrome" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.