

Google's new feature brings the art world

With only one search keyword, users can now explore the art world in museums.

In a blog post on Wednesday, Google announced that it will bring a new experience to users when from now on, you can search for artworks of museums.

"Starting today, when searching for art-related things, you will see relevant results and have the opportunity to learn more about the area of ??your interest," Google said. They also said they will bring in additional 500 million art-related searches every month.

This project is a collaborative product between Google's Arts & Culture, Search and Maps team. Finding an artist can lead you to many relevant results such as a collection of artists' works, museums with product displays. Some also offer high resolution images.

Now, Google Maps also allows users to "walk" through museum rooms, with notes and information on the wall. Click here will show you images in high resolution.

Video introducing new features of Google Search

This is part of a big project, in addition to other projects such as the presidential library and Art Camera.

You finished reading the article "Google's new feature brings the art world" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.