Currently, Gemini has expanded its features and search capabilities, allowing us to quickly find the content we need right on Gemini. For example, you can search for YouTube videos on Gemini using keywords related to the video you're looking for. Immediately, you'll find the YouTube video you need on Gemini. Below is a guide on how to search for YouTube videos on Gemini.

Why should you use Gemini to search for videos on YouTube?

YouTube's search engine finds videos based on specific keywords and filters, but with Gemini, you can use natural language to search for videos on YouTube. While this may not seem like a big change, it will completely transform the way you search for videos on YouTube.

Simply put, Gemini knows all the content available on YouTube (just like YouTube's search engine), and it also "understands" your query. It's like having a personal assistant who also knows the content of each YouTube video, when it was uploaded, the number of views/comments, video length, etc.

For example, you might ask, "Compare explanations of 'mindfulness meditation' across the top 10 health channels, list the common techniques they mention, and highlight the shortest instructional video under 10 minutes ." With this search, Gemini will first examine the general theme in videos from the best channels and then find a video that encompasses the best methods. You'll get a video that provides the best information for your purpose and doesn't waste your time.

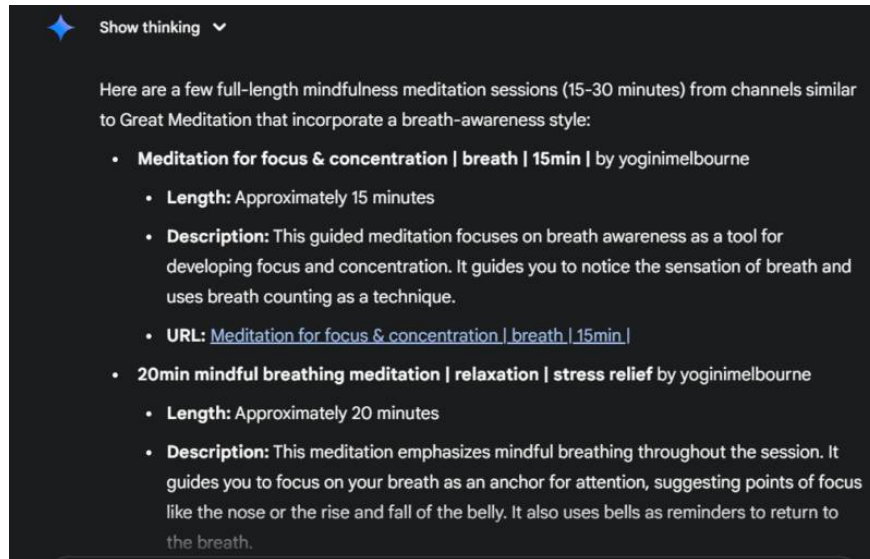

This type of search cannot be performed using YouTube's search bar, even if you use YouTube's filters, operators, and other features.

Add a prompt to refine the search.

YouTube searches always start a new search, so you can't refine the results beyond what the filters offer. Gemini, on the other hand, allows you to add prompts to further fine-tune your search.

If you're not satisfied with the results or want to search further on the same topic, you can add a prompt. Following the example prompt above, you could ask questions like 'find full mindfulness meditation sessions

(15-30 minutes) from channels similar to Great Meditation that use the same breath awareness style'.
