The plot and gameplay of Pokémon Masters

Before going deeper into the problems in Pokémon Masters, the prerequisite is that you need to know the plot system and gameplay of the game.

In the world of Pokémon Masters, you will in turn witness the emergence of dozens of the most prominent gym coaches and leaders in the series. The plot of the game is inspired by the desire to bring together all the Trainer and Gym Leader and their signature monster from every other Pokémon game that has been launched before, in order to bring players the Experience a more interesting experience in a large and diverse 'competition' arena in both character and combat style as well as tactics.

However, unlike many Pokémon titles that have been launched, Pokémon Masters will direct players to focus more on Trainer instead of Pokémon. The context of the events in the game will also be a completely new location - the island called Pasio. The trainers will gather on this island and will be divided into 'sync pairs', such as Red and Charizard or Brock and Onix. There are a total of 65 sync pairs (the number will increase after each update). Players will participate in 3v3 matches in real time. All you need to do is choose a suitable pair for you to fight against NPC opponents. The final goal that everyone aims to be the championship of the Pokémon Masters League.

Of course, to step on the winner's podium, you will have to participate in the battle of 'brainstorming', figuring out how to win and collect the necessary number of badges. After winning 5 Gym badges, you will have the right to join the Champion League of Pasio Island.

Pokémon Masters is an F2P game, and trading and purchasing activities will also appear in the game.

Battle system in Pokémon Masters

Here are some basic information about the battle system in Pokémon Masters

Fighting 3v3 team

3v3 match in Pokémon Masters

In Pokémon Masters, most battles take place in a 3-on-3 pattern. Each team will consist of 3 pairs of trainers and Pokémon to join the fight. What you need to do is to look at each of the strengths and weaknesses, Trainer Moves (coach moves) and Unity Attacks (combined attacks) in your team to get advantages and good results in the every battle!

Real-time combat system

Battles in Pokémon Masters are not turn based and are played in real time. More specifically, the battles will not take place in the traditional turn-based form but instead, you can see the energy bar appear on the screen, when the energy bar is filled (full power) means is that you can activate a pokemon attack on your side, then just calculate and attack only!

The first one to defeat the opposing squad will win. Therefore, calculating the time and using the energy bar appropriately will be an especially important factor.

Fill up the moving and attack power bars

The move bar (Move Gauge) and the amount of consumption for a given attack

The move gauge will be fully recharged as time goes by. How much energy you consume will depend on the migration strategy you have chosen.

Energy bar is shared

Movement energy is used by the whole team and is not a resource owned by a single pair. Pay attention to this, especially during the 'teamwork' process, to prevent other players from being able to move because the energy bar is exhausted.

The role of the coach

There are 3 roles for coaches:

1. Strike : The coaches own High Attack and Sp. Attack, responsible for main damage in the team.
2. Tech : Ability to regulate the situation excellently, causing a disadvantage to the enemy team.
3. Support : Support healing and buffs for teammates.

Role	Strengths
 Strike	Pairs with High Attack and Sp. Atk.
 Tech	Excels in inflicting status conditions.
 Support	Heals and buffs teammates.

The role of the coach

Increase damage in each attack!

In the team, the 'Strike' will be the main position responsible for causing damage to the opponent. They own Attack and Sp. High attack, and possesses the ability to execute powerful attacks. However, the defenses of the 'Strike' are not good at all, they are very vulnerable due to low defense. You can take advantage of the 'Support' to support this weakness.

Disrupt enemy teams with 'Tech'

'Techs' can be detrimental to the enemy team by causing 'weak' status and lowering critical stats. In general, the main role of this position is to harass, upset and disrupt the tactics of the enemy.

Use the 'Support' to effectively support the remaining positions

The Support can replenish the opponent's 'Tech' which has been 'stolen' by the opponent and heal the other positions of his team. The Sync Pairs hold the most support positions with high HP (blood) and Defense (defense). In return, their attack stats are very weak, so instead of causing damage, the Support is usually responsible for 'carrying the damage' to the team and supporting the offensive ability for the Strike.

Move and attack

Distribute damage and movement

Each Pokémon can flexibly use many different attack methods and depending on the actual situation of the battle, a certain amount of moving energy will be consumed after each attack. Attacks that hit multiple enemies or inflict a greater amount of damage will consume more movement power. As such, you need to carefully calculate the correlation between the amount of HP and the enemy's stats before executing the attack.

Take advantage of the opponent's weaknesses

Each type of Sync Pair has its own advantages and disadvantages

There are many different types of Sync Pair, and each has its own advantages and disadvantages. Using a counter-attack directly on an enemy's weakness will help create a greater amount of damage and vice versa, make use of your strengths to partially counter the opponent's attack.

Take advantage of Trainer Moves

Trainer Moves and number of charges, equivalent to the number of uses

Sync Pairs can also take advantage of Trainer Moves to gain certain benefits. Each movement will be different according to each specific Sync Pairs, including some 'valuable' effects such as HP recovery and stat increase.

Trainer Moves does not consume moving energy

Trainer Moves does not use Move Gauge, so you can use Trainer Moves while waiting for the movement power to return.

Trainer Moves has a limited number of uses

Instead of consuming moving energy, Trainer Moves has a certain number of 'castes', called 'charges'. The stronger the Trainer Moves, the lower the number of 'charges'. Have sensible usage strategies to maximize their effectiveness!

Win the match with Sync Moves

Sync Moves are special attacks that come from both trainers and Pokémon. The player can use these actions once after a certain number of other basic attacks are performed. Compared to normal attacks, Sync Moves is stronger and deals more damage.

Unity Attacks (only for multiplayer mode)

Unity Attacks is the most powerful attack in multiplayer

There is another battle function in Pokémon Masters called Co-op Battle. With this function, players can cooperate with their friends to fight instead of fighting the NPCs. In particular, players can use Unity Attacks - a combined attack exclusively for this function to 'finish' the opponent.

The reason only appears in the multiplayer mode by Unity Attacks is the strong attacks performed by the whole team. The condition to deploy an Unity Attack is that both members of the team must constantly perform offensive moves, requiring a huge amount of Move Gauge. Let's team up with the team members closely to create a total attack - Unity Attack - 'game'!

Above is some basic information about the plot, gameplay, and battle system of Pokémon Masters. Wish you have great moments of entertainment!
