

Hotgirl Instagram discovered identical cloud collage on travel photos around the world

Is this cloud flying to take pictures with this girl everywhere?

It has long been known that Instagram is a virtual living environment, an exaggeration of the truth to show users the extraordinary lives of celebrities. But if you do it too much, it will suddenly turn into a joke for people.

Argentine hotgirl Tupi Saravia has recently been criticized by many when she discovered she put a cloud image on all her photos, even though they were taken around the World.

The first person to discover it was @santilishi , which was later posted by commentator Matt Navarra. Matt Navarra posted a tweet comparing the four images posted by this girl at 4 different times, in 4 locations from Indonesia, Italy to Thailand, but all appeared an identical cloud cluster.

This travel 'influencer' spookily has the same clouds in every photo. 🤪🤔😁

The truth is that Saravia did not hide her editing photos before posting. In an interview with BuzzFeed, she revealed the use of the Enlight Quickshot app to add details and retouch skies to Instagram photos. But the fact that she grafted a cluster of clouds for all the pictures also made netizens feel very funny.

Not her mistake. Clouds should stop stalking her.

Funny comments from netizens

It seems that this is not a big scandal, because this girl also spent money and time to travel to these locations to take pictures, not combine the whole scene behind. come in and post it. But this incident also reminds users that social networks are often 'virtual', do not trust the photos posted to Instagram.
