Suggestions on how to set the desk according to feng shui

People have the phrase 'Most destiny, second movement, tam feng shui, the fourth virtue, the five poems'. This statement has partly demonstrated the role of feng shui elements in human life, including learning.

A good feng shui classroom will bring harmonious energy, help children feel comfortable and always look at learning in a positive way. Therefore, parents are increasingly interested in feng shui desks.

Direction to set the study table according to feng shui

According to feng shui, the study desk should be left facing the Northeast, because this is the direction of wisdom and learning. Do not place a study table in the middle of the doors and windows or turn your back on these two positions because it can make your child insecure. Parents should give baby chairs to create stability and certainty. Also, do not let chandeliers or air conditioners go directly into your child's study position, avoiding distractions. Tables should not be placed in the corner of the room. However, if you can only put in this position, parents can overcome by hanging a wind bell to dispel the sound of gas, absorbing the earth and air.

Should set the table opposite the Northeast

How to layout and decorate the desk space for children

Books need to be arranged neatly and scientifically to stimulate their learning spirit. In addition to books, on the study table, there should also be some decorations such as paintings, glass columns, quartz bridges. Next to the study table can put a green tree to bring fresh air to children. The color of the desk should be chosen according to the child's liking because no child wants to study with a table they don't like.

The study desk is not just a book
