

How to catch rare Pokemon in Pokemon GO - Rare creatures, very difficult to catch

In the game Pokemon GO, there are many different types of Pokemon, including rare creatures that are very difficult to catch. In the article below, the network administrator will guide you how to catch these rare types of Pokemon.

Tips for catching Pokémon at all times

First, try to get a circle around the Pokémon, as small as possible, before throwing the Pokéball. The smaller the ring, the harder it is for the Pokémon to escape the ball.

And if the Pokémon escapes, just throw as many Pokéballs as you can before it runs away.

This helps you beat the hands of low-level players so you can easily catch rare Pokémon. However, for players at a higher level, they will have more options. After reaching level 7, the player can collect Razz Berries from Pokéstops, which can be fed to wild Pokémon to make them less likely to run away or escape Pokéballs.

At level 10, players can access to get more energy for Pokéballs in the form of Great and Ultra balls. Wild Pokémon at all levels have a hard time escaping from these balls, so these balls are extremely useful for catching the most 'elusive' monsters.

To get better results, players can eat a Pokémon one Razz Berry, then throw it into a higher level Pokéball to make it harder to escape.

When taking to the streets, players will have more ways to catch rare Pokémon. For example, after making a Pokémon trade, players will essentially be able to give each other Pokémon. Even a high-level trainer can sell rare Pokémon to a new player on the team for the purpose of controlling Pokémon gyms in the area.

Good tips to help you catch rare Pokémon

Here are some tips to help you increase your chances of catching rare Pokémon in Pokémon Go.

Increase your Trainer level

The higher your level, the more Pokémon you can encounter. Reaching level 30 will give you a greater chance of encountering rare Pokémon than level 10.

Therefore, make sure you regularly catch Pokémon, complete research tasks as well as use lucky eggs to double the amount of experience you will receive.

Use Incense and Lure

Two types of items will help attract Pokémon to your location and if you are lucky, rare Pokémon may appear.

Incense is especially useful for players in areas where many Pokémon do not appear. Meanwhile, the Lure Module is used at PokéStops and any player present here can catch Pokémon.

Use your daily Incense

Daily Incense will take effect within 15 minutes, but that is enough for you to encounter rare Pokémon like Jangmo-o or Tirtouga. It's also the only way to find and hopefully catch your Galarian Articuno, Galarian Zapdos, and Galarian Moltres.

Conduct transactions with other players

Pokémon Go has added a trading feature since 2018, so you can trade rare or legendary Pokémon with other players. It would be great if you met another player who owns a Pokémon that you don't have or are looking for. However, please note that you cannot trade Mythical Pokémon and need to stay within a certain range of the trader.

Hatch

Eggs are one of the easiest and most effective ways to get the Pokémon you're looking for. Because through incubation, you can get Pokémon that don't often appear where you live. It's best to prioritize the 12km and 10km eggs because they will give you rarer Pokémon than the 5km and 2km eggs. For 7km eggs, it's best to check the egg pool as it can change depending on the event.

Pay attention to in-game events

Events happening in Pokémon Go are the best times to catch new Pokémon. After the end of the event, the odds of catching them can be drastically reduced. These events will also help you find costumes for Pokémon or special research tasks - which only appear for a limited time.

Certain types of Pokémon prefer specific habitats

While this isn't explicitly shown on the game map, some real-world locations you visit can influence which Pokémon you'll encounter. For example, you are more likely to encounter sea monster Pokémon near seas and lakes. As for steel-type Pokémon, they often appear in urban areas and cities.

Therefore, participating in the game in different locations will help you find more new Pokémon, even the rare egg-laying species that you have been looking for.

Use the Raid Pass for the 5-star boss hunt.

If you want to add great Pokémon to your Pokédex, the Raid Pass is the way to do it. With it and the support of the Poké Genie app, you can easily access legendary Pokémon hunts around the world. Currently, the Raid Pass costs 100 PokéCoins, you can top up to buy or earn PokéCoins by keeping Pokémon in the Gym.

Search and research the Pokémon network in your area

Pokémon nests are clusters of Pokémon ranging from common to rare, appearing multiple times in the same location. Sometimes, they only appear once, so make sure you catch as many Pokémon as possible when you find them. From there, you can encounter many nests of Pokémon you rarely play.

Achieve the Catch Bonus Medal

Each type of Pokémon has an associated Catch Bonus. You will level up through catching Pokémon of specific types. For example, with Hex Maniac, catching a ghost-type Pokémon will increase the medal level from Bronze to Silver. At the same time, it also gives rewards each time you catch a ghost-type Pokémon. This means that catching low-level Pokémon will naturally increase your chances of getting rarer Pokémon.

Complete your special research missions

Keep your special research tasks up to date. This will help you catch Mythical Pokémon like Mew or Shadow - variant Pokémon of Legendary Pokémon. These Shadow variants are especially useful because they can help you add Legendary Pokémon that haven't appeared in a while to your Pokédex.

Catch every Pokémon you see

Just because they're regular Pokémon doesn't mean catching them won't help you on your path to becoming a Pokémon Master. Each Pokémon you catch will help you gain a certain amount of experience. Some will count towards the Medal Catch Bonus. Some give you a certain amount of pull, supporting the evolution of your Pokémon.

You should also catch evolved Pokémon you encounter because they will provide more candy than before evolving.

All of these factors will help you complete your Pokédex soon.
