

How to change Apple Watch name

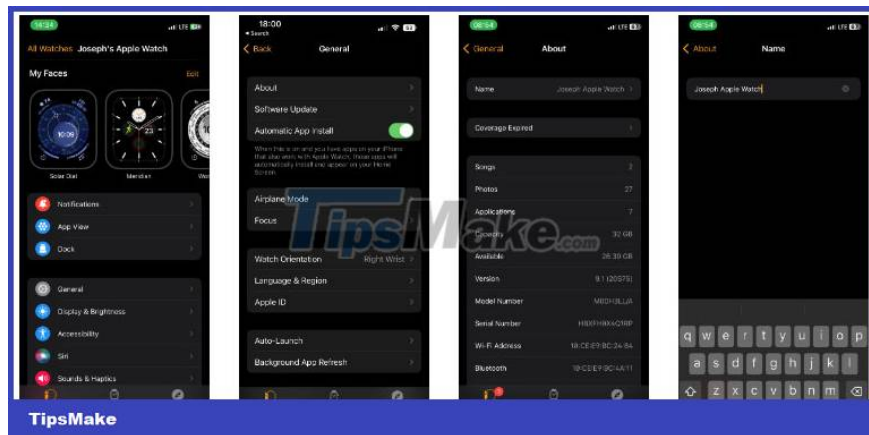

One nice benefit of owning multiple Apple devices is that you can give each device its own name. The feature is also available for the Apple Watch, making it easy to locate it among your other devices.

Whether you just bought a new Apple Watch or want to rename your current watch to avoid confusion, here's how to rename your Apple Watch.

How to rename Apple Watch on iPhone

It only takes a few quick steps to change the name of your Apple Watch. Here's what you need to do:

1. Open the Watch app on your iPhone.
2. Make sure you're in the My Watch section and tap General.
3. Now, tap About and you'll see your default Apple Watch name at the top.
4. Enter your preferred name and press Done on the keyboard.

The name of your Apple Watch that appears on all connected devices will change automatically, but it may take some time before you see the change, so wait patiently.

Why is the Apple Watch name so important?

The name of your Apple Watch is a special factor that makes it easy to identify your wearable, especially if you've paired it with multiple devices before or have a family member who also owns an Apple Watch.

To easily identify your current watch among other connected devices, you'll need a unique name for it. This is useful when you need to create or retrieve a backup, as any data you back up will be saved with your Apple Watch name in the Watch app.

Your Apple Watch name will also appear when using other Apple apps like Walkie-Talkie or if you're using any connectivity features on your connected Apple devices. And most importantly, your Apple Watch's name will let people know you're the watch's owner.

Deciding what to name your Apple Watch is entirely up to you. You can even choose something creative like "007" if you like the theme inspired by the famous spy movie. No matter what you name it, renaming your Apple Watch will make it easier to recognize the device. And don't forget that you can also rename your other Apple devices to your liking.
