Canva provides many tools to professionally modify your design. For example, you can change the design color in Canva with just a simple click. When a user uploads an image of a new color palette they want to apply to their current design, Canva will recognize the color palette and automatically use it for the design content without any further editing. Below is a guide on how to change the design color in Canva.

Guide to changing design colors in Canva

Step 1:

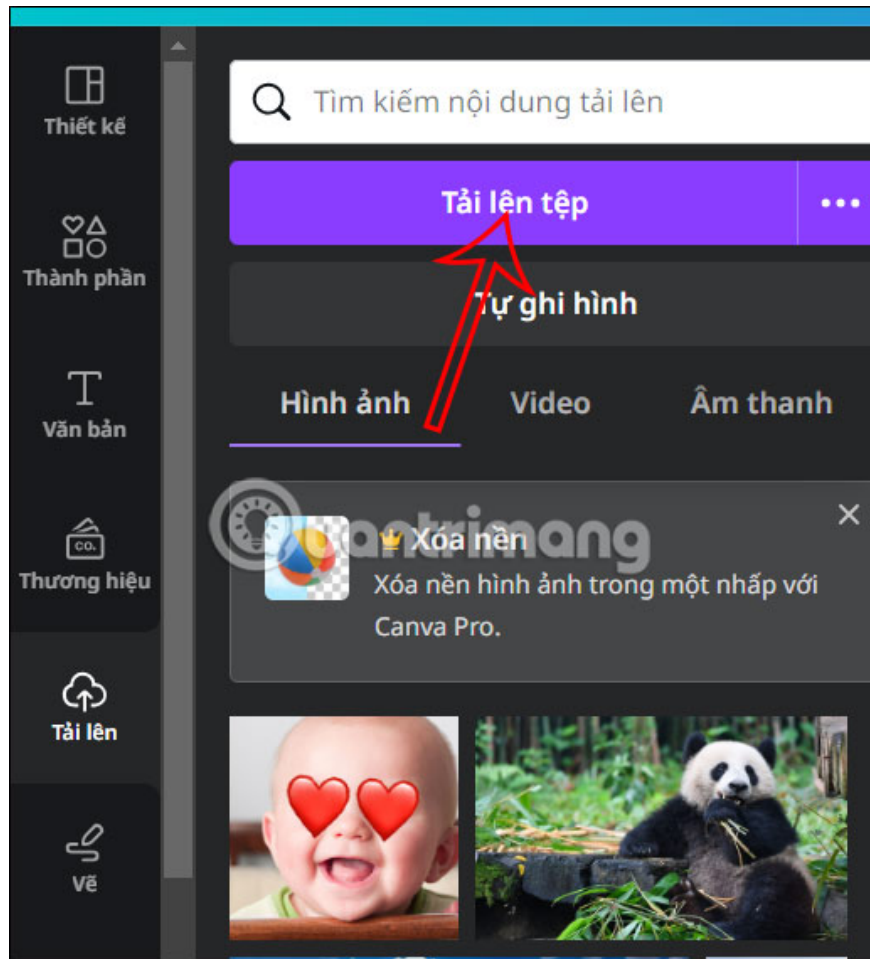

First, open the design you created in Canva or start a new Canva design. Then, upload the image of the color scheme you want to change for your design in Canva.

If we search on Google, we'll find color palettes like these to use in Canva.

Step 2:

Returning to the Canva interface, click Upload to upload the color palette image you want to use for your design in Canva.

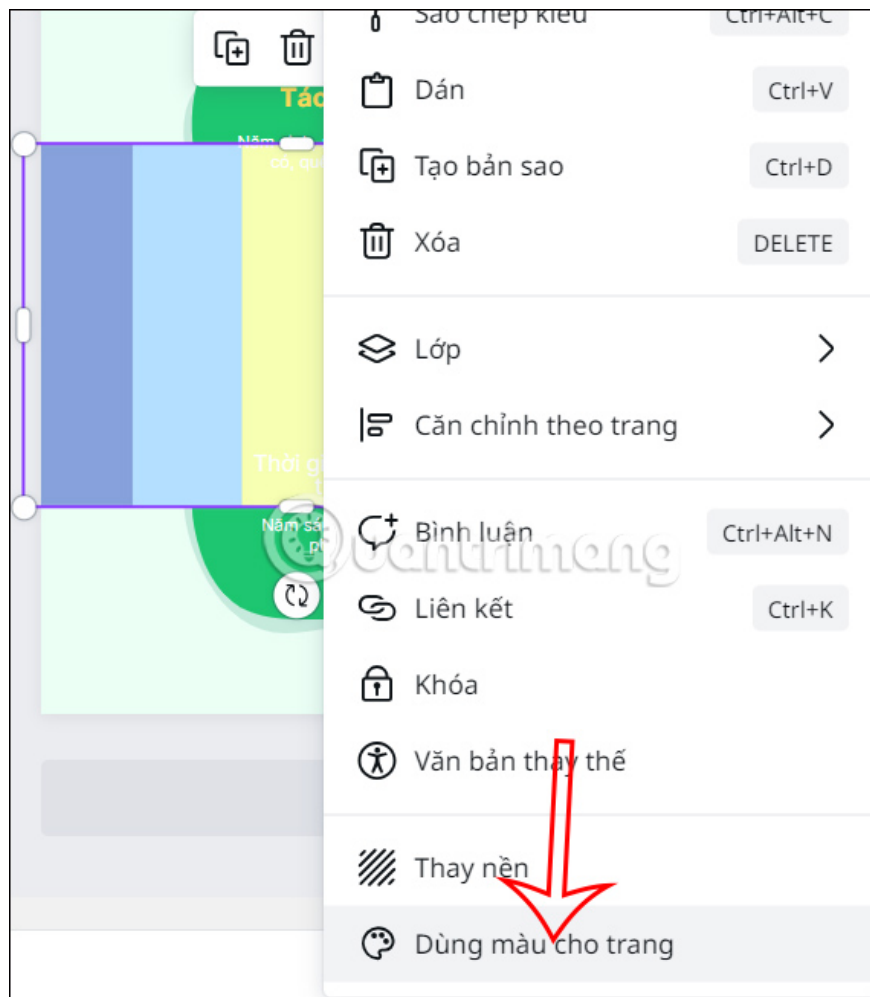

Step 3:

Next, you drag the color palette image into your current design in Canva to change the colors in that design.

Step 4:

Now, right-click on the color palette image and select "Use color for page" from the list of options below, as shown in the image.

As a result, you will see the new color palette applied directly to the Canva design you created earlier.

If you are not satisfied with the colors in this design, you can change them using the same steps as above. Finally, make any other changes to the design and then download it as usual.
