

How to change the vibration level and type on Galaxy S20

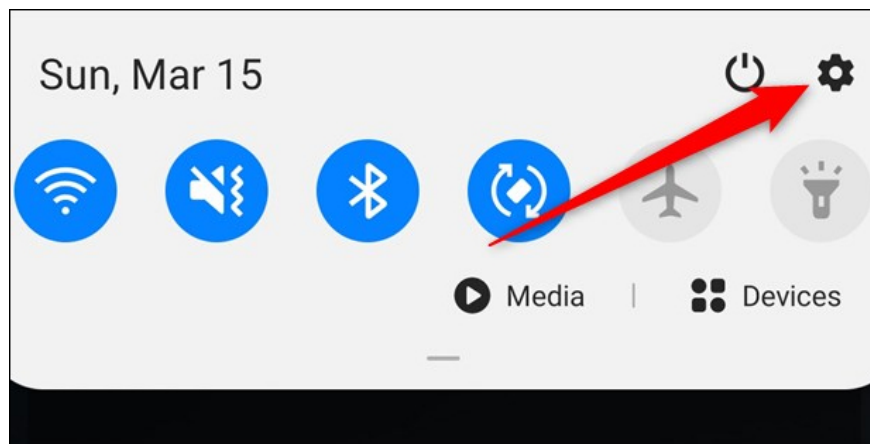

Vibration level of calls and messages on Galaxy S20 is always kept at maximum level. So how to change the vibration level on the S20.

Vibrate mode on Galaxy S20 to alert users when a new call or new message in case you leave the device's sound off. By default, the vibration mode on the Galaxy is always at the highest level and many people do not like that kind of loud vibration. If so, you can completely adjust the level of vibration on the device, maybe even change the type of vibration you want. The following article will guide how to change the vibration mode on the Galaxy S20.

Instructions to adjust the vibration mode on the Galaxy S20

Step 1:

We swipe down from the screen and then click the gear icon to access the Settings interface on the device.

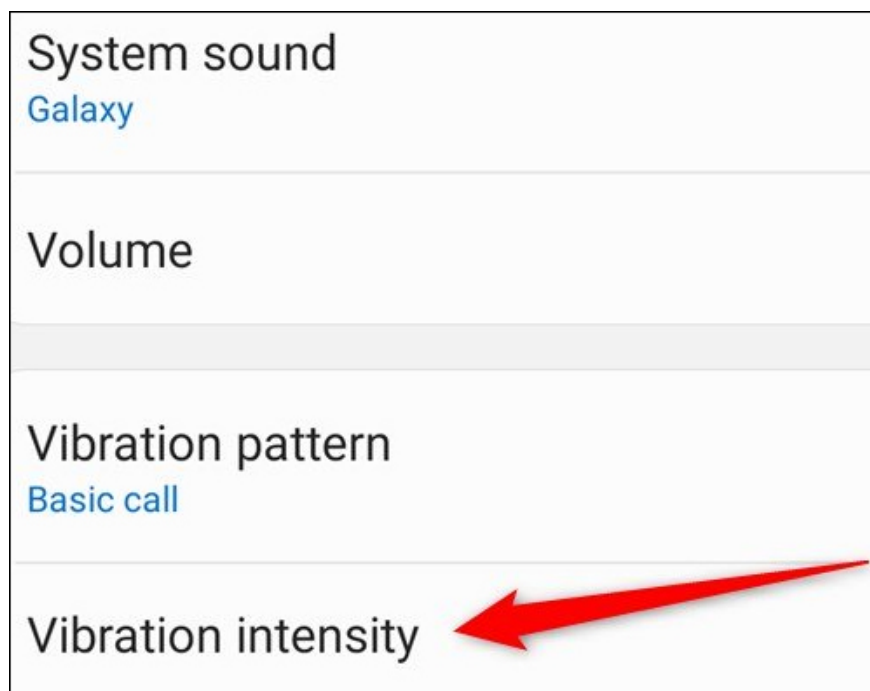

Step 2:

Switch to the new interface, users find the Sounds And Vibration setting to adjust the sound and vibration of the device.

To adjust the vibration level we click Vibration Intensity .

Step 3:

In this interface, you can adjust the vibration level when a call comes in Incoming call, new notification at Notification and vibration feedback when touching the screen at Touch interaction.

Users will adjust via the horizontal bar below.

Step 4:

To change the vibration pattern on Galaxy S20 , users click to select Vibration Pattern in the interface to adjust vibration and sound.

Display list with new vibration styles for Galaxy S20. You only need to click on each vibration type to test before choosing to use a new vibration type.

- Basic call
- Heartbeat
- Ticktock
- Waltz
- Zig-zig-zig
- Off-beat
- Spinning
- Siren
- Telephone
- Ripple

You finished reading the article "How to change the vibration level and type on Galaxy S20" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
