

How to convert a document into an eBook to read on iBooks

Apple has integrated iBooks into all iOS devices, allowing users to read eBooks as well as many other document formats. However, RTF, DOC, TXT, and LIT files are not always compatible. Therefore, to ensure that documents can be read properly on your iPhone, iPad, or iPod, you need to convert them to a suitable eBook format.

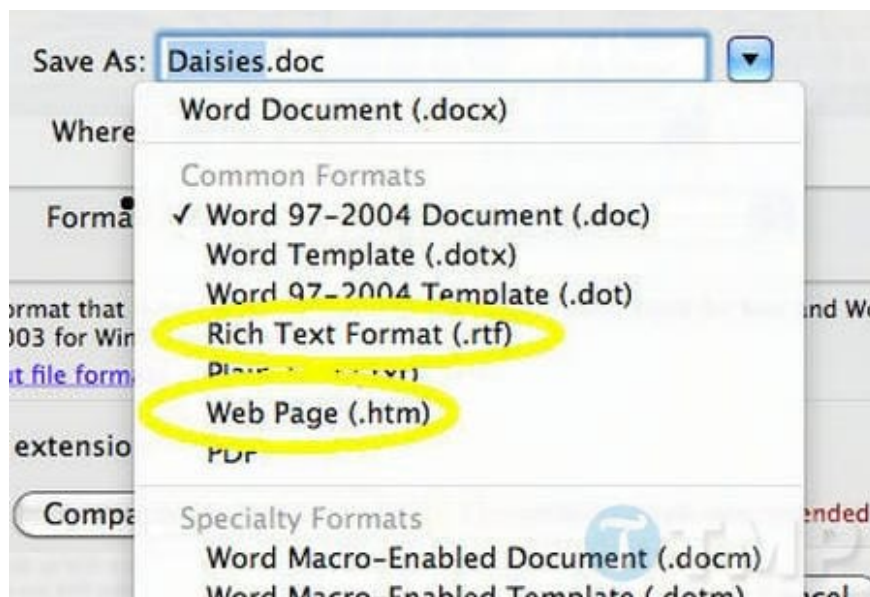

The good news is that you can easily convert these documents to eBooks using Calibre, a free tool that supports converting many different file formats.

How to convert a document into an eBook to read on iBooks

Download and install Calibre on your computer.

Calibre is a tool that helps convert eBooks from various formats to EPUB, allowing you to read them on iOS and eBook Reader. However, the software does not support direct conversion from DOC or DOCX to EPUB. Therefore, if you are working with DOC or DOCX files, you need to convert them to a format that Calibre supports, such as LIT, HTML, PRC, RTF, PDB, TXT, or PD.

To convert a DOC file to HTML or RTF, first open the DOC file in Word and select File => Save As => Web Page or Rich Text Format.

After saving the file in HTML or RTF format, follow these steps to convert it to EPUB.

Step 1 : Add your files by clicking the "Add Books" button located in the upper left corner.

Step 2 : After adding the file, select the document you want to convert and then click the Convert button .

Step 3 : After clicking Convert, a popup window will appear to edit the metadata.

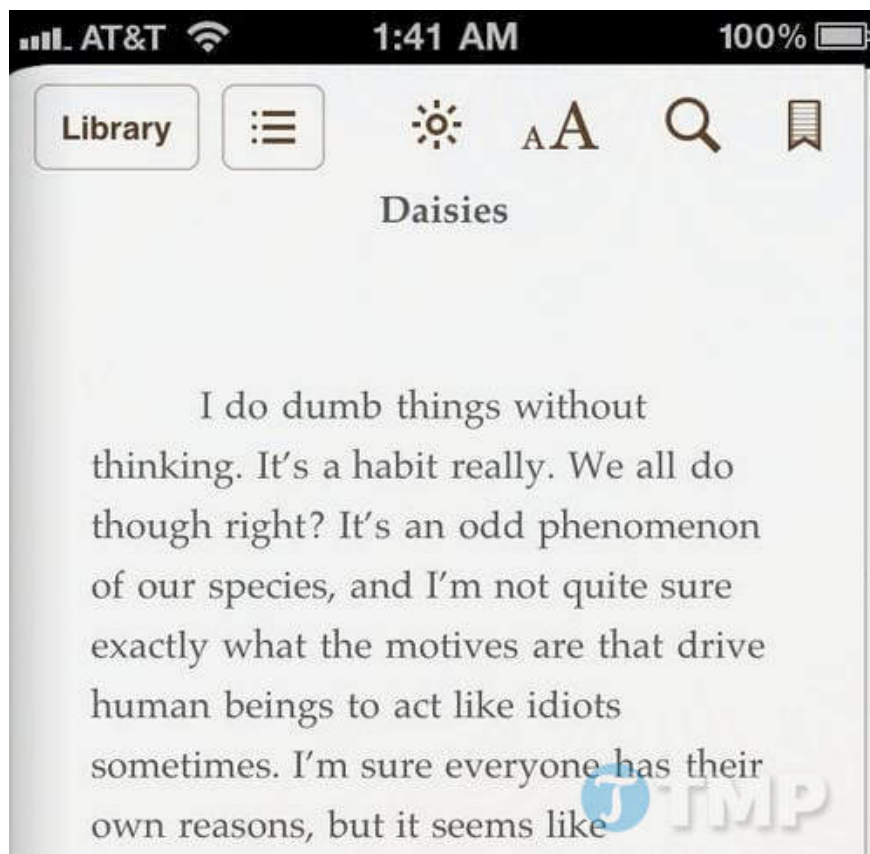

Here, you can change the author's name, add a book cover, customize the interface, and many other options. Make sure the Output Format is EPUB, then click OK.

Step 4 : Once the conversion is complete, tap Send to Device to send the EPUB file to iOS and copy it to your iTunes Library.

Step 5 : From now on, you can read eBooks directly on your iOS devices (iPad, iPhone, iPod).
