

How to create, rename, delete folders on iPhone / iPad?

Usually after a period of use, your iPhone / iPad screen will be flooded with apps and games. Then, the search and use will become difficult plus the aesthetics will no longer exist. Therefore, the most reasonable solution is that you group similar applications and games into folders, both easy to find and increase the aesthetics of the screen interface. If you still have concerns about how to do it, please refer to our guide below.

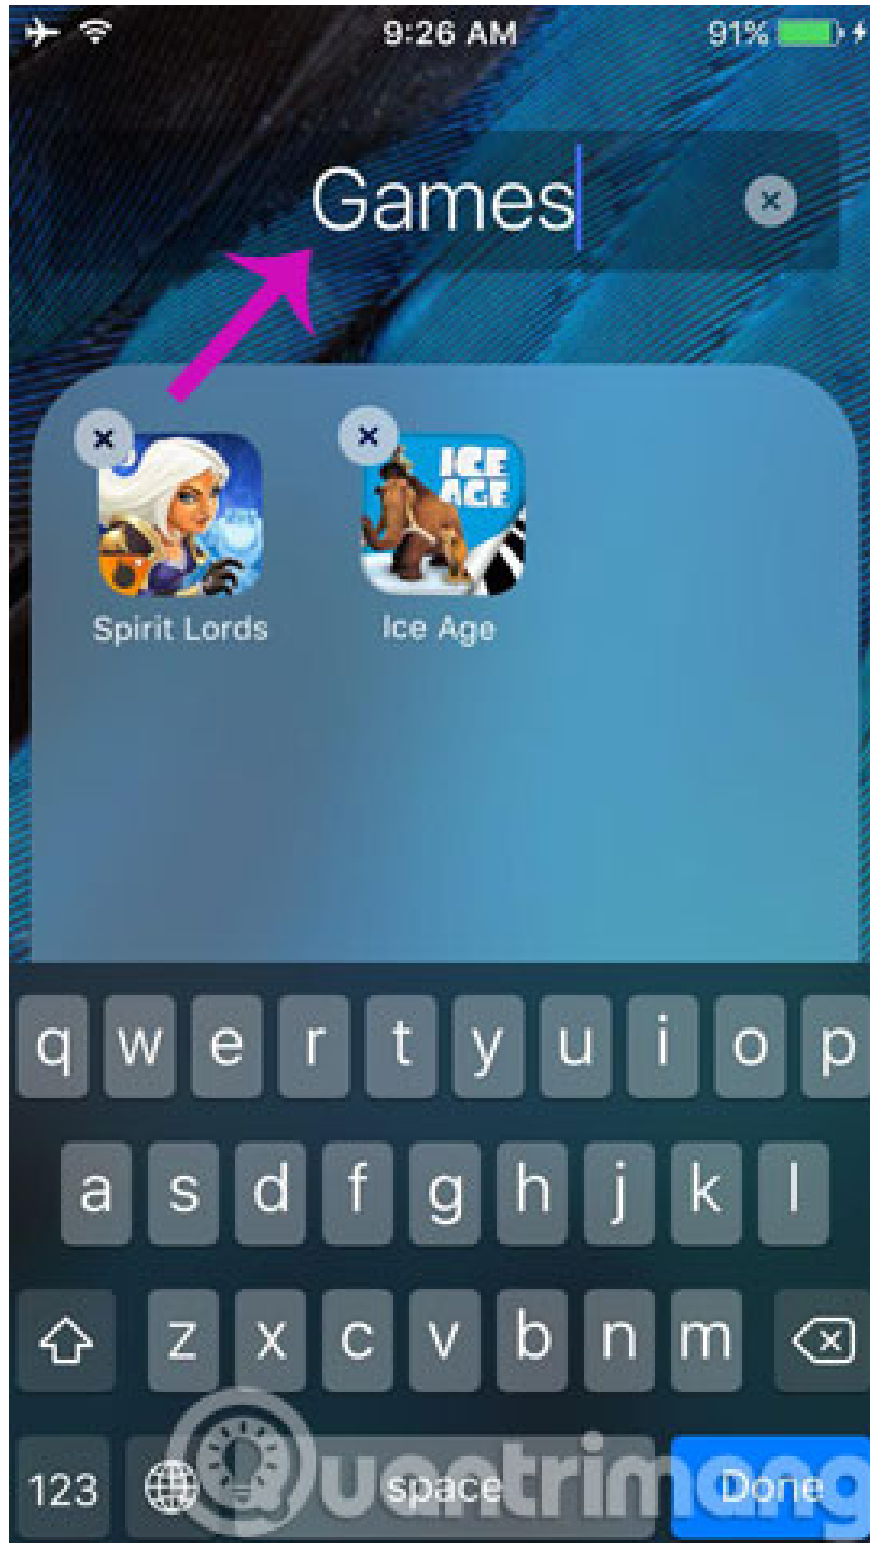

Usually after a period of use, your iPhone / iPad screen will be flooded with apps and games. Then, the search and use will become difficult plus the "aesthetics" will no longer exist. Therefore, the most reasonable solution is that you group similar applications and games into folders, both easy to find and increase the aesthetics of the screen interface. If you still "wonder" about how to do it, you can refer to our guide below.

1. Create a new folder

To put applications into a folder, press and hold on one of the icons you want. After that, all application icons will vibrate. At this point, just drag the application icon over the other application you want to put together the same folder.

2. Rename the folder

When you first create the folder, select the name for the folder according to your wishes. If you want to rename the folder, you just need to press and hold on an application in it, when the app icon starts vibrating, click on the frame to rename it.

3. Delete the available directory

To delete a folder, simply press, hold, drag all applications out of the folder. When you remove the last application, the folder will disappear.

The above are simple steps for you to create, rename or delete folders on iPhone, iPad. From now on, you can easily group apps of the same type to make the screen look "airy".

1. How to turn off the auto update feature on iPhone
2. Prevent iTunes from manually reinstalling the App on iPhone in 3 steps
