2. Content

To have an Infographic that is easy to understand, read, and engaging, you need to set up a content system for that infographic. You need to write down the information you want to show on Infographic. One of the most basic information needed on Infographic is:

1. Name, age
2. Address
3. Academic level
4. Individual skills, specialized skills
5. Hobby / dream / job .

You need to write this information selectively, specifically and honestly. If you write too long, it will make readers not understand anything and boring. If you write too short, it does not reveal all the talents in yourself. Instead of designing an infographic, you need to design an infographic full of content first.

BE FOOD ALLERGY AWARE
SIX THAT SAVE LIVES

1 THE SYMPTOMS
Signs of a severe food allergy reaction (called anaphylaxis) are 2 or more of:

- Breathing difficulty, wheezing or coughing
- Vomiting, diarrhea or cramps
- Hives or widespread skin redness
- Swelling of tongue, lips or throat
- Feeling very faint / drop in blood pressure (If only this 1 symptom or with just severe wheezing, it is still anaphylaxis.)

3 TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE
In studies of those who have died of anaphylaxis, they did not receive epinephrine, or they got it too late. Prompt use of the shot is vital.

4 GO TO THE HOSPITAL
A person who's had an epinephrine shot must be taken to hospital to ensure the reaction is under control. If symptoms have not improved in 10 to 15 minutes, a second auto-injection should be given.

2 IN ANAPHYLAXIS: Use the auto-injector right away. Call 911 and report an emergency.
Epinephrine is considered a safe drug. Antihistamines are for mild symptoms only, and will not halt anaphylaxis. Err on the side of using the auto-injector.

5 RECLINING IS BEST
In the ambulance, the person having the reaction should be lying down, with the legs raised (this improves blood flow).

6 DON'T GO IT ALONE
No person should be expected to be fully responsible for self-administering epinephrine. Assistance during anaphylaxis is crucial.
