However, if you are concerned about the problem, other people will see the application and information, . or for some reason you can disable the widget on your iOS 10 device lock screen.

Disable Widgets on iOS 10 lock screen:

First click the Settings icon on the iPhone's Home screen .

On the Settings screen, find and click Touch ID & Passcode .

Enter your passcode when requested.

On the Touch ID screen & Passcode you will see the Today View option enabled by default, displaying the green slider.

Your task is to click the Today View slider to OFF, the slider button will be white.

From now on you or any user using your phone will not be able to swipe the screen to access Widgets anymore.

However, the lock screen widget is available when you swipe right on the Home screen (when your phone is unlocked), even if the Today View option is enabled. Therefore, you can still quickly access information and applications via widgets when using your phone.
