Google Slides is often considered a 'poor cousin' of Microsoft PowerPoint, but Google Slides can be a collaborative tool on the cloud and a useful tool when used with Google Docs.

We already know how to embed tables and charts directly into Google Docs, but do you know Google Drive allows users to insert Slide directly into Google Docs? This article will show you how to embed Google Slide into Google Docs

How to embed Google Slide and Google Doc

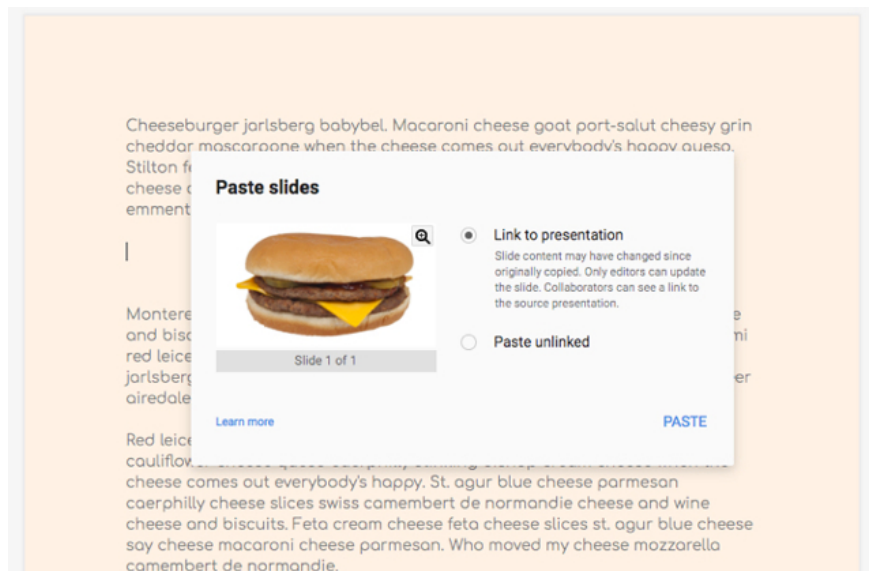

Google Doc can turn into a rich visual document when adding a slide of a manually created presentation. Here's how to add slides to Google Doc:

Step 1: Log in to Google Drive and open a prepared presentation in Google Slides.

Step 2: From the left panel, click on the selected slide and then on the menu, click Edit > Copy .

Step 3: Open the Google Doc to insert slides, click on the location on the document to add a slide.

Step 4: On the menu, click Edit > Paste , select Link to presentation to turn on the link between the source and the document.

Google Slide is embedded directly, so you can change the slide and update the document with one click to display the changed information.

In Google Docs, select the embedded image and click on the small down arrow to open Linked slide options. Then click Update to sync Google Doc with the changes you made in the original slide. If you want to unlink the presentation, you can do so on the same menu.

This Google Slides feature can enhance collaboration. For example, you can change the slide quickly to show an interesting story instead of boring text documents.

I wish you all success!
